GARDEN, FARM, BEES, ETC.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—

Roses are exceptionally fine and singularly free from green fly. The roasting weather is, however, shortening their period of beauty. Cut back the stems of spent blooms, so as to help the roots for a second or autumn bloom, which is often better than the first. If feasible, give the plants a mulching of manure to keep the soil from drying up. If not already done, make a sowing of Wallflowers and other spring bedding plants at once. Go over Violas frequently with the scissors, removing every faded bloom and seed pod. This will prolong their season of flowering and add to the general vigour of the plants. The herbaceous borders are now very beautiful, and it will be necessary to pay attention to staking, and perhaps thinning, any specimens growing out of proper proportions with their surroundings. As the weather is ideal for the destruction of weeds, the hoe should be kept going among all crops in flower and vegetable departments.

AUTUMN sowing Cabbages strongly recommended are Drummond's First Early Market, Drummond's All Year Round, Drummond's First of All, 1/6; Early Harbinger, 1/4; Offenham, Flower of Spring, 1/2; Ellam's Early, 1/- per ounce; half and quarter ounces pro rata; Drummond's Spring Gem, 6d. and 1/-, packets only.—57 and 58 Dawson street, Dublin. FEEDING.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

A hard condition, rather than fat, should be aimed at in feeding the breeding stock. To keep the birds active grain should be scattered in places where they will have to scratch to obtain it, and their diet should consist of a greater quantity of grain than of mash. The hens which were bred from last season should have a rest from egg-production before they moult; therefore, their diet should be moderate, with plenty of opportunity for exercise and foraging. After they have moulted and their plumage is growing they can be allowed a more generous diet, including biscuit meal, pollard, bran, ground oats and fish or meat meal. With the older birds for breeding purposes care should always be taken to avoid giving too much food of a very fattening nature. Farmers who have large flocks of birds often run them all together, and select their eggs for setting from the whole flock. This is not wise, as by doing so chickens are often obtained from bad layers. When possible, the best layers should be selected and run together with some good cocks.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

ALLEGED THEFT OF WATCHES.

(BEFORE MR. HANNAN.)

Ruth O'Connor, a young girl, with an address at Oxmantown road, Dublin, was charged with the theft of 15 ladies' wristlet watches, value £5 2s. 6d., the property of the North Light Razor Blade Company.

Detective-Officer Kilkenny said that the girl had admitted taking the watches from the company's premises, where she had been employed as a typist for a fortnight.

The girl was remanded for a week.

Mr. S. Dempsey appeared for the defence.

TINNED FISH STOLEN.

Wm. Dowdall, of Corporation Buildings, Nicholas street, Dublin, a carter, pleaded guilty to having stolen a case containing 100 tins of canned fish, value £3 5s. 3d., from a lorry while in transit from the North Wall to the premises of Messrs. Angus Watson, of Sir John Rogerson's quay.

Mr. Hannan said that, having regard to defendant's past good record with his employers and his family, he would discharge him on his own bail of £10.

Christopher Doyle, 55 High street, who was charged with receiving the canned fish, knowing it to have been stolen, was allowed out on his own bail of £10.

Mr. L. Trant McCarthy defended in both cases.

MOTORIST'S LICENCE SUSPENDED.

At Bray District Court yesterday, before Mr. Liam Price, District Justice, Patrick Campbell, Clonard, Terenure, was charged with recklessly driving a motor car on June 12, and with being drunk in charge of a motor car at Bray.

Mr. R. Brereton Barry (instructed by Mr. Robinson) appeared for the defendant.

Superintendent O'Reilly said that the defendant attempted to drive up the narrow passage leading to the amusements park at Bray, where the traffic was particularly heavy.

Sergeant Rowe said that defendant was driving in a zig-zag manner, and witness took the number of the car.

The defendant said that he had been playing golf at Greystones Club. He had only two pints of beer at the club with Mr. Dickenson. They then drove to the Grand Hotel, and had dinner, with which they had one bottle of Bass each. While driving to the fair on Bray Head the road was narrow, and he decided to stop the car, and a crowd gathered round.

Dr. Whitehead, Greystones, said that he examined the defendant in the barracks and found that his pulse was fast and his temperature high, which he attributed to excitement. Defendant was sober.

Mr. Price said that a Circuit Court Judge laid it down that a man must first be proved to have been drunk, and secondly to have been drunk in charge of a car. In this case he held that the defendant was under the influence of drink, but he could not hold that he was drunk, and, consequently, that charge would have to be dismissed.

Convicting on the charge of reckless driving, the Justice imposed a penalty of £6 and 33s. expenses, and ordered the suspension of defendant's licence for twelve months.

CANAL WORKERS' CONDITIONS.

Under the new agreement for workers employed by the Great Southern Railway Company on the Royal Canal the following minimum rates will be paid:—Gangers, 45s. per week; labourers—existing staff, 40s. per week; new staff, 36s. per week; temporary weeders and bank rangers, 36s. per week; bank rangers who combine duty of sluice keepers, 45s. per week; dredger gangers, 46s. per week when dredging and one shilling per week less when not dredging; dredger drivers, 45s. per week when working dredger and 40s. per week when not working dredger. When labourers are acting as firemen on the dredgers they are to be paid at the rate of 41s. per week. These rates do not affect men who are at present in receipt of higher rates.

William Cummins (21), 1 McGuinness square, Dublin, was knocked off his bicycle when a private car and a bread van collided at Tara street yesterday afternoon. He was brought to Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital, where he is detained, suffering from injuries to the right foot.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT (CRIMINAL) COURT

HOUSEHOLD GOODS STOLEN.

"A WEDDING PRESENT," SAYS PRISONER.

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

Mrs. Elizabeth Merrigan, 29 Upper Grand Canal street, Dublin, pleaded not guilty to having stolen a quantity of household goods and clothing material, of the value of £17 16s. 2d., from Mrs. Alice Smith, Lansdowne House, Lansdowne road, Dublin, by whom she was employed as a domestic servant.

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Gorman, 35 Malone Gardens, Bath avenue, Sandymount, mother of Mrs. Merrigan, pleaded not guilty to receiving a portion of the goods, knowing them to have been stolen.

Mr. P. Lynch, K.C. (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted.

Mr. James J. O'Connor, solicitor, defended.

Mrs. Smith gave evidence of having Mrs. Merrigan in her employment as a daily servant. In May she missed the articles which were the subject of the charge. Mrs. O'Gorman, in conversation with witness, admitted having some of the articles, which, she said, were given to her by her daughter. Witness had never made wedding presents to Mrs. Merrigan.

Mr. O'Connor said that the case for his clients was that the goods had been given to Mrs. Merrigan by Mrs. Smith.

Guard Dunphy said that he visited Mrs. O'Gorman's house, where he found a number of articles openly displayed. Wallpaper, which, it was alleged, had been stolen from Mrs. Smith, was on the wall of Mrs. O'Gorman's hall. Mrs. O'Gorman said that she got the articles from Mrs. Merrigan, who said that they had been given to her by Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Merrigan, on oath, denied having stolen any of the articles, which, she said, were given to her by Mrs. Smith.

Judge Davitt told the jury to find a verdict of not guilty in the case of Mrs. O'Gorman, and she was discharged from custody.

The jury found Mrs. Merrigan guilty of stealing the property, and, having received a good character, she was allowed out on giving bail to be of good behaviour for two years.

The Court adjourned until 11 o'clock on Monday.

STOLEN JEWELLERY.

Edward Meighen (20), 89 Eden Villas, Glasthule, Co. Dublin, and Joseph Murphy (20), 96 Eden Villas, pleaded guilty to having stolen two gold bangles, a signet ring, silver brooch, gold brooch, necklet, gold pendant, gold ring, dress ring, silver Kruger coin, earring, and a cross, valued, in all, at £29, the property of Miss Lydia Thomas, 2 Ballygehen avenue, Sandycove, Co. Dublin.

On giving bail to keep the peace for two years, the prisoners were released.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT.

INJURED IN COLLISION.

Edward Wilson, a salesman, of 68 Offaly road, Cabra, Dublin, was awarded £95 15s. damages against Catherine Rogan, Cardiff Cottage, Finglas, for personal injuries sustained as the result of a collision that occurred between plaintiff's motor cycle and a motor car driven by defendant's daughter.

Edward Wilson, the plaintiff, said that he was employed by the Irish-American Oil Co., and was cycling to work when the accident occurred. The defendant's car swerved across his path. His motor cycle was damaged, and he was unable to work for nine weeks.

Eileen Rogan, the defendant's daughter, said that her car had almost stopped when the collision took place. Plaintiff should have seen her about to pass into St. Peter's road.

Judge Shannon said that he was satisfied that the driver of the defendant's motor car turned sharply to the right, and gave the cyclist no warning.

Mr. J. P. Murnane (instructed by Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. W. G. Fallon (instructed by Mr. H. Lemass) for the defendant.

ACTION SETTLED.

On the application of Mr. F. M. Duffy, for Mr. Walter H. Moloney (instructed by Mr. J. F. Lawlor), a settlement, under which David Beatty, 1 Ashbrook Villas, Sallymount avenue, Ranelagh, was to be paid £40 by Norman E. Allen, 4 Merrion Row, Dublin, damages for injuries sustained when he was knocked down by a motor belonging to the latter, was made a consent of court.

Mr. Sainsbury (instructed by Messrs. Porter, Morris and Co.) appeared for the defendant.

DUBLIN BOYS RESCUE A BATHER.

Colour-Sergeant Moore and Privates R. Carroll and J. Comerford plunged into the sea, fully dressed. They brought her safely to the shore, where she collapsed and had to receive medical attention.

YESTERDAY IN THE LAW COURTS.

ARTIST AND HIS WIFE.

A DEED OF SEPARATION.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

An application for the restitution of conjugal rights was heard in a case in which the petitioner was Emily Grace Henry and the respondent was Paul Henry, artist and landscape painter, Carrigoona Cottage, Kilmacanogue, Co. Wicklow. There was no appearance for the respondent.

Mr. Paul McCarthy (instructed by Messrs. O'Connell, Rooney and Co.), for Mrs. Henry, said that the parties were married on 17th September, 1903, at St. Peter's Church, Bayswater, London, according to the rites of the Church of England, and there were no children. The parties lived for a time in Surrey and later in Belfast, and in Dublin at addresses in Fitzwilliam square and Merrion row. On 27th October, 1930, a deed of separation was entered into between them, under which the husband agreed to pay for two years an allowance of £4 a week. When the two years expired, Mrs. Henry wrote to her husband asking him if he was going to provide a home for her, but she received no reply to that or to a subsequent letter. Payment, however, was continued at the rate of £4 a week to the end of January or the beginning of February, 1933. Mrs. Henry's solicitors wrote to Mr. Arthur Cox, solicitor for the respondent, stating that, if Mr. Henry did not provide a home for his wife, proceedings would be taken. In reply, they got a letter in which Mr. Cox said he had been instructed by Mr. Henry to say that it would be "quite impossible" for him again to live with his wife, as relations between them had grown to be intolerable and had necessitated the deed of separation. A further letter to the same effect was received later, and the present proceedings were instituted.

Mrs. Henry gave evidence regarding her marriage to the respondent. For about seven years after their marriage, she said, they lived in London; then went to Achill Island, Co. Mayo; later to Leenane, Connemara, and subsequently to Dublin, where they had a studio in Merrion row. On 27th October, 1930, they separated. By the terms of the deed the separation was to last for two years, during which time she was to receive £4 a week, payment being guaranteed by a bank. When the two years' term was up, she wrote three or four letters to her husband asking him if he intended to provide a home for her, but she got no reply. The payment of £4 a week to her continued after the two years' period, but ceased in February, 1933.

Mr. Justice Hanna said that he would require some evidence of the reason why the parties separated.

"My husband would want to answer that," said Mrs. Henry. "I never wanted to separate."

Mr. McCarthy—Why was there a limit of two years fixed?—I thought my husband would have come to his senses by that time.

But why was the deed of separation entered into?—My husband wished it; I did not wish it.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Why did your husband wish it?—I cannot explain it.

Was there any cause known to you why he should desire to live apart from you?—No.

Did he ever tell you why he wanted to leave you?—No.

Mr. McCarthy—At the present time, are you anxious to live with your husband if he would provide a home?—Yes.

Mr. Justice Hanna said that in a great many separation cases wives said they wished to go back, whereas they really wanted alimony. Suppose Mr. Henry had continued to pay the £4 a week, would Mrs. Henry have wanted to go back to live with him?

Mrs. Henry—Yes, if he wished it.

Mr Justice Hanna said that he would give the order sought, with costs against the respondent. He was satisfied that the separation of 1930 was entered into at the desire of the husband when both parties were domiciled in the Free State, and that, if the husband wished the wife would have continued to live with him

Mr. McCarthy said that the husband could end the proceedings at any time when he provided a home for Mrs. Henry.

WINDOW FITTINGS INVENTION.

RESTRAINT INJUNCTION SOUGHT.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

Andrew Nicholson, 14 Fassaugh road, Cabra, Dublin, applied for an interlocutory injunction to restrain Henry John Hoban, 16 Dawson street, Dublin, and John Nolan, 31 Hollybrook road, Clontarf, from manufacturing or offering for sale a type of window fittings, of which he claimed to be the sole inventor. An interim injunction had previously been granted, and the present application was to have the injunction continued until the action had been decided.

Mr. J. M. FitzGerald, K.C., and Mr. T. C. Tobias (instructed by Messrs. McKeever and Son) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. H. J. Molony, K.C., and Mr. Frank Monks (instructed by Mr. Jas. Lane) for the defendants.

Mr. Molony said that no patent had been granted to the plaintiff, and, until a patent was granted, no one had a monopoly in the manufacture of an article.

Mr. FitzGerald replied that the plaintiff had got provisional protection. The defendants were manufacturing and putting on the market the type of window fittings which he invented. The defendant, Hoban, had put his name along with that of plaintiff on the form of application sent to the Industrial Commercial Registration Office for provisional protection. Hoban had since entered into negotiations with the Dublin Corporation for the supply of fittings at the rate of 3,000 a week, and the article supplied to the Corporation was substantially identical in design with that invented by plaintiff, but inferior in other respects to plaintiff's specification.

Mr. Justice Johnston allowed the motion to stand until Wednesday next. The interim injunction was discharged, and a direction was given that an account be kept of sales.

WINNING SWEEPSTAKES TICKET.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MEREDITH.)

In an action of Alfred Lound, of the Constable Arms, Sproatley, near Hull, and Francis F. Smith, of Sproatley, against Charles Buck, of Pasture House, Flinton, and the Irish Hospitals' Trust, Ltd., in which the plaintiffs claim to be entitled each to one-third share of the seller's prize of £1,000 in respect of a ticket which drew Windsor Lad in the Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake on the Derby of this year,

Mr. Lynn (instructed by Mr. C. Lehane) on behalf of the plaintiffs, applied for an interlocutory injunction to restrain the Hospitals' Trust from paying to the defendant, Buck, any sum greater than £333 6s. 8d., pending the hearing of the action.

Mr. Nolan Whelan (instructed by Mr. P. H. O'Reilly), for the Trustees, consented to the order.

Mr. Justice Meredith granted the interlocutory injunction asked for.

Mr. J. Mooney (instructed by Mr. H. E. Joyce) appeared for the defendant Buck.

A MAYO ACCIDENT.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

In an action of Charles Windsor, of Mill street, Westport, against Thomas Lyons, of Bridge street, Ballyhaunnis, in which the plaintiff claimed damages for personal injuries caused through the alleged negligent driving of the defendant's motor car,

Mr. Sherry (instructed by Messrs. Hoey and Denning) applied, on behalf of the defendant, to have a consent to settlement received and made a rule of court, the consent providing that the plaintiff should be paid £450 and £15 15s. for costs.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne received the consent and made it a rule of court.

Messrs. Garvey and Smith were the solicitors for the plaintiff.

"SLAUGHTER OF CALVES."

CORK BUTCHER'S ACTION.

ALLEGED LIBEL IN NEWSPAPERS.

In an intended action by Denis J. O'Brien, a victualler, of North square, Macroom, Co. Cork, against the Dublin Express Mail, Ltd., Parliament street and Cork Hill, Dublin, and The Press Association, Ltd., Fleet street, London, for damages for alleged libel,

Mr. Vincent Rice, K.C., with whom was Mr. Gearoid O'Sullivan (instructed by Messrs James L. Burke and Co.) applied ex parte on behalf of the intending plaintiff for liberty to issue and serve a concurrent plenary summons on the Press Association out of the jurisdiction.

Mr. Rice moved on the affidavit of Mr. O'Brien, the intending plaintiff, in the course of which it was stated that the Evening Mail published in its issue of the 20th April, 1934, what purported to be an account and description of an alleged slaughter of calves at Abbeyfeale, Co. Limerick, in an unskilled and brutal manner. Mr. O'Brien referred to an article bearing the captions, "Calf Carcases Dumped in Quarries." "Amazing Results of Slaughter Scheme in Free State"; and to portion of the article under the caption "Revolting Scene," as follows:—"It is reported from Abbeyfeale, in West Limerick, that after a fair there calves were hastily slaughtered in a by-way, hammers, and even stones, being used. The carcases were got rid of at give away prices, or dumped. A resident stated that the portion of the town where over seventy calves were slaughtered, presented a revolting appearance afterwards.

PLAINTIFF'S AFFIDAVIT.

The article, continued Mr. O'Brien, in his affidavit, was headed: 'From P.A. Correspondent," and he believed that, as indicated by the heading, the statements and charges were supplied and published by the Press Association, Ltd., to the Daily Express and Mail, Ltd. "I am the person pointed at in said article as guilty of such unskilful slaughter and such criminal and revolting conduct," stated Mr. O'Brien, in his affidavit, "as I am the only person who slaughtered a number of calves in Abbeyfeale on the occasion referred to. I positively say that the allegations referred to are absolutely unfounded. Consequent on the publication referred to, and similar statements published by other newspapers, the Civic Guards interrogated me and the men employed by me in slaughtering calves at Abbeyfeale on the occasion in question. The Guards took statements in writing from me and my said employés, but no prosecution has been instituted, or is pending, the Guards being satisfied by their investigations that there was no foundation for the said charges."

Mr. O'Brien further stated that he had been seriously damaged in his reputation and in his business as a victualler by the publication.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne granted the application.

In an intended action by the same intending plaintiff against the Independent Newspapers, Ltd., Middle Abbey street, Dublin, and the Press Association, Ltd., for alleged libel stated to have been published in the Evening Herald of the 20th April, 1934, in relation to the matter,

Mr. Vincent Rice, K.C., with whom was Mr. Gearoid O'Sullivan (instructed by Messrs. James L. Burke and Co.), made a similar application on behalf of Mr. O'Brien He said that the affidavit in this case was substantially the same as in the first case. The article complained of was headed "Rush for Bounty on Calf Skins," and contained the words: "Another result of the rush is unskilled slaughter, and it is reported from Abbeyfeale, in West Limerick, that after a fair there calves were hastily slaughtered in a by-way, hammers and stones being used."

Mr. Justice O'Byrne granted the application.

RUNNING DOWN CASES.

DUBLIN ACTIONS SETTLED.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE.)

Mr. J. Ryan, of Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., solicitors, applied, on behalf of the defendant, in a case of James Colmey, of Little Britain street, Dublin, against Richard Edwards, of Dolphin's Barn street, Dublin, to have a consent to settlement received and made a rule of court. The action was for damages for personal injuries caused to the plaintiff through his having been knocked down by a motor lorry at Sir John Rogerson's quay, Dublin, on the 19th of last March, and the settlement provided for the payment of £225 to the plaintiff.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne received the consent, and made it a rule of court.

Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co. were the solicitors for the plaintiff.

A similar application was made by Mr. Ryan, of Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., solicitors, on behalf of the defendant in a case of William W. Harris, of De Courcy square, Dublin, against Robert Henry Barklie, of Nashville Park, Howth. The plaintiff claimed damages for injuries caused to him through his having been knocked down by the defendant's motor car while he was crossing the road at Fairview on the 5th of last March. The consent provided for the payment of £900 to the plaintiff.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne received the consent, and made it a rule of court.

Messrs. Dobbyn and McCoy were the solicitors for the plaintiff.

AGED SISTERS' WILLS.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

Mr. Maurice Walker (instructed by Messrs. F. Sutton and Co.) applied for an order directing the incorporation of various documents with the wills of Barbara C. Symes and Susan Margaret Symes, late of 2 Gresham terrace, Dun Laoghaire. The application was made on behalf of the executor, Joseph M. Symes, Glen-na-Carraig, Carrickmines. Barbara and Susan Symes, said counsel, were sisters, who lived together on terms of great affection, and died in April and May of this year, at the respective ages of 93 and 96 years. Both made wills on the same day—the 17th May, 1928. Each wrote her own will, and, having done so, both went together with them to a local bank manager, had them attested, and then brought them home and put them in a safe. At various dates before and after making their wills each wrote documents giving instructions about the disposal of certain articles of jewellery and furniture, and, in order to carry out their wishes, it was necessary that some of those documents should be attached to the respective wills. The sisters had been mutual executors to each other, and in each will occurred the clause: "I have expressed my wishes in writing as to the disposal of my share of the household furniture and silver, which I trust my executor will carry out." The property in each case was worth about £1,500.

Mr. Justice Hanna made the order sought.

SALE OF GREYHOUNDS.

QUESTION OF A PARTNERSHIP.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MEREDITH.)

In a partnership action, in which Maurice F. Davin, Hillview, Carrickbeg, Carrick-on-Suir, is plaintiff, and F. Harold Clarke, Leopardstown House, Foxrock, Secretary of the M. J. Connolly (instructed by Mr. P. F. Irish Turf Club, defendant.

Mr. C. Lavery, K.C., with whom was Mr. Verrington), on behalf of the plaintiff, moved that the defendant and his servants be restrained by injunction pending the hearing of the action from (a) holding and conducting or advertising during the year 1934 auctions or sales of greyhounds at Harold's Cross Greyhound Racing Track, Dublin, or Clarke's Horse Repository, 21 Montpelier Hill, Dublin, under any style or title, except that of Clarke and Davin's Greyhound Sales; (b) obstructing or interfering with or excluding the plaintiff in the exercise of his rigfhts as a partner with the defendant in the firm of Clarke and Davin for sales of greyhounds at Harold's Cross Racing Track and Clarke's Horse Repository, and (c) applying the profits from such sales on any basis except in equal shares between the plaintiff and defendant.

Counsel read affidavits on behalf of the plaintiff stating that a partnership on a "fifty-fifty" basis was entered into by the plaintiff and the defendant in the greyhound auction business, and the plaintiff alleged that the agreement was a yearly agreement. Although sales were advertised to be held this year by "Clarke and Davin," the plaintiff alleged that an advertisement appeared in a Dublin new-paper describing one sale as "Clarke's Greyhound Sale." The defendant dissolved the partnership in April this year.

Mr. Leonard, K.C., with whom was Mr. T. U. O'Dell (instructed by Messrs. Murphy and Davin), for the defendant, said that the defendant pleaded that either party could terminate the partnership at any time without any notice.

Mr. Justice Meredith said that he did not see the necessity for granting an interlocutory injunction, as the defendant had undertaken to keep an account of the profits of future sales, and if the Court held that Mr. Davin was still a partner the profits from these sales would be divided equally between the plaintiff and the defendant.

Mr. Lavery said that the difficulty was that sales were held at Harold's Cross Racing Track, and these auctions were being carried out by Mr. Fred Clarke, a son of the defendant, who up to this was an employé of the partnership firm. If he got an undertaking from Mr. Clarke and his son to maintain the rights of the partnership during the year he would be satisfied. Another way out of the difficulty was a speedy trial.

Mr. Justice Meredith refused the application for an injunction, fixed the hearing of the tria for the 30th July next, and reserved the question of costs.

CORK WOMAN'S PROPERTY.

A PARISIAN BEAUTY PARLOUR.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

Mr. Hewitt Poole (instructed by Messrs. Babington, Clarke and Mooney), on behalf of the Munster and Leinster Bank, applied for letters of administration of the will of the late Miss Annie O'Connor, a native of Cork. The circumstances, he said, were rather unusual. Miss O'Connor was born in Cork of Irish parents, but in 1903 she went to Paris and set up a beauty saloon at 10 Rue de Florence, and she died there on 29th March, 1934, a British subject and a spinster. While she lived in Paris she was registered as an alien, and she reported every year to the French police. She visited Cork frequently during the past thirty years, but the question arose whether she had not acquired a French domicile. If it were ruled that she had, the French Revenue authorities would insist on the payment of duty on all her personal estate, including that in Ireland. When in Cork on 17th August, 1932, she made a will dealing with her Irish property, which was valued at about £14,000, and included leasehold property, with stocks and shares. On 18th February, 1934, when resident in Paris, she made a French will in her own handwriting, dealing solely with her French property, including the beauty saloon, valued at about 20,000 francs. The French will did not contain any clause purporting to revoke the earlier will made in Cork. According to French law, the Irish will was good and the French will was good, according to the law of this country, while a French legal practitioner who had been consulted gave it to be understood that the decision of the Irish Courts on the subject of domicile would be accepted by the French Courts. The Munster and Leinster Bank were the executors and trustees of the Irish will, and the legatees under it were satisfied with the disposition made by the testatrix of her French property. Counsel stated that, in his own view, it would be very hard to argue that the lady had not acquired a French domicile by virtue of living in France and carrying on business there for over thirty years.

Mr. Justice Hanna said that all he could do to cut the Gordian knot was to give a limited grant under Section 78 of the Probate Act, which would permit of the necessary proceedings being taken to determine the matter of domicile.

LURE OF FOREIGN LEGION.

LETTER FROM TWO DUBLIN YOUTHS.

The lure of the Foreign Legion of France last week prompted two 19 years old Dublin boys to throw up good jobs in order to seek enlistment. They left their homes secretly last Wednesday, and no one could say where they had gone.

Patrick O'Neill's father, who lives at Upper Basin street, recollected how keen his son had recently become on books about the Foreign Legion, and after a week a letter came saying that Patrick and his companion, Patrick Kinsella, had arrived in Dunkerque (France) and were going next day to join the Foreign Legion.

"When I have reached Algeria I will write and give you full particulars," the letter stated. "I will write frequently afterwards, so please don't worry."

If O'Neill has gone to Algeria, however, he has gone alone. Last night Kinsella's father, who lives at 18 St. Enda's road, Terenure, received a telegram from London, from his son, saying that he was stranded. Mr. Kinsella immediately telegraphed a sum of money, and expects his son home to night.

Young O'Neill's parents are not unduly anxious about their strong young six-feet son.

"A tremendous amount that is written and talked about hardships of service in the Legion is rubbish," Mr. O'Neill told an Irish Times reporter last night. "My wife visited the French Consulate in Dublin, and the Vice-Consul told her that France is justly proud of her Legion. He said, too, that hundreds of young Irishmen apply every year to join it, and that if they come to the Consulate (though O'Neill and Kinsella did not do this) they are told of all the difficulties.

"Since my son went away I have heard of two Dublin boys who are in the Legion. Their parents hear from them regularly, and the boys appear to be well and contented."

Kinsella and O'Neill were employés of Messrs. Guinness. They resigned before going away, and received from the firm sums due to them under their weekly savings scheme, amounting in each instance to about £20. Both had excellent characters, and had been employed for five years.

Young Kinsella's father, who is a widower, is glad that his son is coming back. "I have heard of fine fellows who joined the Legion and were forced to desert afterwards. I got a terrible shock when I discovered where my son had gone," he said last night.

The Finnish four-mast barque Mozart and the Swedish four-mast barque C. E. Pedersen, two competitors in the ocean race for windjammers from Australia, have arrived at Falmouth, Mozart taking 121 days, and C. E. Pedersen 127 days.

THE DUBLIN TENEMENTS.

TENANTS AND THEIR RENTS.

NEW LEGISLATION FORESHADOWED.

A PROPOSAL that the Dublin Corporation should take over all the tenements in Dublin and make them fit for human habitation was made by Miss S. Harrison at a conference under the auspices of the Irish Tenants' Protection Society, which was held at the Mansion House, Dublin, last night, to consider the question of rents extracted from one-roomed tenants in the Dublin slum areas.

About twenty tenants from various areas in the city were in attendance, and they stated that they were paying rents averaging from 9s. to 12s. 6d. for a single room and 14s. a week for a room containing some furniture. One tenant stated that he was living in a place that had been converted from a henhouse, and was paying 4s. a week. It had only one window, that looked on to a stable.

UNPROTECTED TENANTS.

Mr. T. Trundle, an official of the Society, said that, as the tenants in these instances were not protected under any of the Acts, they were unable to afford the amount necessary for taking legal action, and he thought that the best way would be to have the Rents Acts amended. There should be no politics in a matter of removing the slums, protecting the tenants and fighting the landlords. There were, he admitted, some good landlords, but they were few.

Mr. T. Hamilton, a member of the Society, suggested that in the case of houses that did not come under the Rents Acts a Commission should be set up to apportion the rent and valuation of the house.

Mr. D. Healy, T.C., said that, owing to the heavy cost, he did not think that it would be advisable for the Corporation to take over the tenements as suggested. He felt that it was a matter on which they should recommend the Government to take whatever steps they considered wise.

FORTHCOMING LEGISLATION.

Alderman Dr. Cormac Breathnach, T.D., said the Fianna Fáil Party was fully alive to the situation, and, while he could not promise that legislation would be introduced immediately, he knew that his party had discussed the matter more than once, and in due course they would have legislation dealing with town tenants, ground rents, and the rents in tenement houses. He thought, however, that the local authorities would have to play a big part in this question, and if an Act was passed conferring, say on Dublin Corporation, the power and authority to fix the rents for houses and tenements, he believed it would work well and economically.

The question was urgent, and if this power was conferred on local authorities the whole matter would be fixed up in a very short time. The Dublin Corporation was alive to the needs of the people, and would take every possible steps to protect them.

A PUBLIC SCANDAL.

The Lord Mayor said that he was pleased that the meeting had been called as the matter had become a public scandal. He knew of people in Gardiner street being charged a rent of 15s. per week for one room, and the same amount in Francis street for a tenement room. The Corporation had done much to remedy the evil by supplying cottages at 7s. 6d. per week, and the speeding up of the erection of such cottages would do much to remedy the evil. He himself dealt with practically sixty cases every day, and he hoped that as a result of the recommendation put forward by Alderman Breathnach the Corporation would get the powers suggested.

A resolution was passed requesting that the local authorities be given power to set up Commissions of Inquiry, to report to the Minister for Local Government and Public Health on the question of high rents.

Miss Margaret Pearse, T.D. presided; Mr. P. J. Cahill, T.C., was present, and letters of apology for inability to attend were received from Mr. W. Norton, T.D., and Mr. P. S. Doyle, T.D.

HOUSE BUILDERS' OUTING.

The annual outing of the Dublin and District House Builders' Association took place to Warrenpoint, Rostrevor and Baltray, when a most enjoyable day was spent. All the members present, with their guests, expressed themselves well satisfied with the arrangements made by the organising committee, consisting of Messrs. G. M. Linzell, J. Townley, R. Gough, and the Secretary, Mr. P. Deey.

THE CHILD AND THE CINEMA.

ARE MANY FILMS UNSUITABLE?

VIEWS OF SENATOR O'FARRELL.

SHOULD we have cinemas exclusively for children? Seventy-five per cent. of the big pictures are alleged to be "unsuitable for children." The suggestion is also made that a law is required "to prevent children from seeing ridiculous love films."

Interviewed by an Irish Times reporter, Senator O'Farrell, Chairman of the Censorship of Films Appeal Board of the Irish Free State, said:—As far as we know, there is here the severest film censorship of any country in the world.

Do you approve of two degrees of censorship? he was asked.

Obviously, he replied, the Film Censorship Board must take adult mentality as the basis of its decisions. It would be futile to try to scale down pictures to the child standard. The Censorship has the power to issue two types of certificate—"Adult" and "Universal." The former could only be shown to grown-up people. Certificates of these kinds are issued in Great Britain, but in the Saorstat there has been a certain reluctance to issue "adult" certificates, on the ground that the issuing of such a certificate in connection with any particular film might arouse a morbid and unhealthy interest in the picture that otherwise would not be taken in it.

What do you think of cinemas being specially provided for children?

"PURELY COMMERCIAL."

The question of providing cinemas which would cater only for children is, of course, purely a commercial proposition. It is doubtful whether such enterprise could be worked on a commercial basis. It would be faced with the problem of having a continuous supply of what might be looked upon as suitable films for children. The question of suitable films for children constitutes a very difficult problem and one in which the authority and discretion of parents are vitally involved. I think it is altogether too drastic a statement to say that 75 per cent. of the principal pictures shown in the Free State are unsuitable for children. That might be the case if it were not for the number of rejections which take place at the hands of our censorship. It should be remembered that the childish mind does not always detect what may be evil in a picture. The child looks for action and excitement, rather than subtleties of thought and suggestion.

Regarding the proposition to prohibit, by legislation, children from seeing what have been called "ridiculous love films," one, he said, would first have to have a definition of what a "ridiculous love film" really is. After all, most children's tales have love stories as their basis. Even "Cinderella" has its love affair, although it is one of the first stories children read.

SCOTTISH SELF-GOVERNMENT.

DELEGATES TO EXAMINE IRISH SYSTEMS.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

A commission of inquiry of the Scottish National Party, headed by the Duke of Montrose, arrived in Belfast to-day to investigate the working of self-government in Northern Ireland. The party also intends to visit Dublin to find out how the governmental system works in the Free State, and the tour will also include the Isle of Man.

The commission will study the administrative systems of each country visited and the progress that has been made in industry and agriculture. The party visited Stormont during the day and interviewed a number of officials. They hope to meet Mr. de Valera and Mr. Cosgrave in Dublin.

A statement embodying the results of the mission of investigation will be issued in about a week's time.

THE PRINCE IN A REALLY NEW CAR.

STARTS ENGINE ON ASSEMBLY LINE.

The Prince of Wales yesterday drove a car which only a short while before had been a collection of nuts, bolts, spare parts, and pieces.

He took charge of it when it was still on the assembly line at the Ford Motor Works at Dagenham, Essex, and later, after he had started the engine and had driven for a few yards, the car was labelled, "Not for Sale." It will be presented to the King George's Hospital at Ilford.

The Prince had travelled by air, road, and water to make a lightning tour of the works. He journeyed by 'plane to Hornchurch Aerodrome, by car to the factory, and back to London by motor boat on the Thames.

In the works he watched new light cars leaving the assembly line at the rate of one every two and a half minutes. Later he went into the blinding heat of the blast furnace, from which a stream of white hot metal poured. He expressed surprise at the nonchalant way in which the workmen leapt from side to side of the stream of molten metal. Before he left the furnace the Prince was presented with a small block of pig iron which only a few minutes before had been in liquid form.

WORKERS' WELFARE.

He was particularly interested in the measures for the welfare and comfort of the workmen, and in a school where boys are trained in the type of work required in the factory, and taught how to operate machines used in car construction. Altogether he spent two hours in the factory, and afterwards one of the party with him said: "I have conducted many people around these works, but I have never known anyone to see so much in the available time."

In his tour the Prince frequently stopped to talk to the heads of departments, inquiring particularly regarding the hours and conditions of work.

As he left he saw a shipload of tractors being loaded. A crowd of buyers, who had come to take delivery of the cars, raised cheers, which he smilingly acknowledged.

The Paris Appeal Court yesterday increased to three years' imprisonment the sentence of two years passed by the Correctional Court in 1931 on Madame Hanau in connection with the Gazette du Franc swindle.

BUILDING AND RECONSTRUCTION.

HOME BUILDERS

£700,000 MORE IN GRANTS TO HOUSEBUILDERS.

£700,000 more is to be paid in grants to private builders and public utility societies under the provisions of the new Housing (Financial and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1934. This bill became necessary because the £700,000 provided under the 1932 Act for the payment of grants had been exhausted in the allocations made to private persons and utility societies.

In the original Act, Section 5 empowered the Minister to make a grant of £50 if the construction of the house was begun on or after 12th May, 1932, and completed on or after the 1st April, 1934, but before 1st April, 1935. It is proposed to extend this latter date to 1st April, 1936.

A new provision makes available a grant of £45 if the erection was begun on or after 12th May, 1932, and completed on or after 1st April, 1936, but before 1st April, 1937.

34,648 Houses in Four Years.

Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, Vice-President of the Executive Council and Minister for Local Government and Public Health, in moving the second reading of the Housing (Financial and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1934, in Dail Eireann on 5th July, said that the unparalleled success of their housing programme was shown in the work accomplished since the Act of 1932 became law. Since then 11,692 houses had actually been completed, 15,836 houses were in progress, and 7,120 houses were about to be begun, tenders having been accepted or invited for them. That made a total of 34,648 houses completed, in progress, or about to be begun. That was done in two years as compared with only 26,000 houses provided by the previous administration. In addition to these houses, there were 5,555 houses, in respect of which lands had been acquired and plans approved, and 6,744 houses included in schemes at present being prepared. This made a total of 46,947 houses under proposals initiated during the past two years. The figures included the activities of local authorities, and were mentioned to show the work accomplished and in prospect by the Government.

The New Bill.

The present bill dealt mainly with the provision of houses by private persons and public utility societies. It had become necessary, because the £700,000 provided under the 1932 Act for the payments of grants under Section 5 of the Act had been exhausted in the allocations made to private persons and utility societies. Also the Act provided that houses built by private persons and utility societies must be completed by April 1st, 1935, to qualify for grants. The bill proposed to extend that date until 1st April, 1937, and to provide a further sum of £700,000 for the payment of grants in respect of the houses.

To date grants had been allocated to private persons and public utility societies in respect of 4,361 new houses in urban areas, 5,853 new houses in rural areas, and 4,655 houses for reconstruction—a total of 14,869 houses in all, of which 5,580 had actually been completed, the remainder being in progress. Of the total number of houses, in respect of which grants had been allocated, about 75 per cent. were being provided by private persons and 25 per cent. by public utility societies.

Sliding Scale of Grants.

The bill proposed, as far as urban areas were concerned, to continue the sliding scale of grants introduced under the parent Act. The grant of £50 at present available would be continued in respect of houses completed up to 1st April, 1936, but would be reduced to £45 in respect of houses completed on or after that date, but before 1st April, 1937. In rural areas the grants available under the parent Act would remain unaltered, but the time for completion of houses would be extended to 1st April, 1937.

Since the passing of the Act of 1932 considerable progress had been made in the development of the building materials industry, and during the past two years the percentage of Saorstat materials used in the provision of the average house had been increased from about 30 per cent. to 45 per cent., and further increases were expected as the housing programme developed.

Building costs did not appear to have undergone any substantial change during the past two years. An inquiry by the Prices Commission into the costs of building materials and appliances was in progress, and the findings of the Commission were awaited.

CO. DONEGAL WATERWORKS AND SEWERAGE SCHEMES.

Donegal County Board of Health considered two lists of public health schemes for the county, and in the case of one, already mentioned by the County Council, it was decided to ask the Ministry's sanction to a loan; and in regard to the second, it was decided to ask the sanction of both the County Council and the Ministry.

The amounts for the scheme already approved by the Council were:—Rossnakill, £1,370; Tyrladden, water £480, sewers £150 (£630); Ballintra, £2,000; Ligord, £3,000; St. Johnston, water and sewers, £3,500; Newtowncunningham, water and sewers £3,500.

The Secretary said after allowing for a grant the approximate cost of this scheme was £9,000.

The scheme for which the Board decided to ask the Council's sanction to a loan, as amended at the meeting, included the following items:—Carrigart, water, £3,700; Kincasslagh, water and sewers, £792; Clonmany, water extension, £430; Milford, improvements, £500; Ramafast, water, £7,000; Donegal, sewers, £9,000; Ballyshannon, sewers, £9,000; Clonmany, sewers, £564; Carrick, £2,000; Fahan, £3,000; Ballyhorriskey, water, £100; Ballylar, £100; Porthall, £300; Carfowkeel (Quigley's Point), £400.

The total amount of the schemes, the Secretary stated, was £35,886.

HOUSE LOANS AT 3½ PER CENT.

The Finance Committee of the London County Council has come to the conclusion that insufficient advantage is being taken of the Council's powers under the Housing Acts to advance money at 3½ per cent. to house purchasers, and steps are to be taken to make the facility more widely known. The Chairman of the Finance Committee said that last year only £139,000 was lent under both Acts, whereas in 1926-27 the Council advanced £1,000,000.

It is proposed to make the facility more widely known by means of posters, which will be exhibited on the Council's institutions and vehicles, and in the parks, and the committee propose also to seek the co-operation of the Corporation of London and of the Metropolitan borough councils in order that the posters may be exhibited at town halls and other municipal buildings.

The total lent by the London County Council amounts to £4,501,000, mostly under the 1923 Act. It is now proposed to lend at 3½ per cent. up to 90 per cent. of the agreed, or assessed, value. Since building societies lend at 5 per cent. and advance only 75 per cent. of the agreed value, the County Council appear to be making an attractive offer. The Council's scheme permits of reasonable repayments, and legal charges are to be kept down to the minimum.

LONG SPAN BRIDGES.

In a paper on "Long Span Bridges" read at the International Congress for Steel Development at Westminster, Mr. R. Freeman said that the fact that nearly all the bridges of more than 1,000 feet span were in the United States was not entirely due to the great breadth of rivers in America, but to the courage and enterprise of its engineers. With steel of the quality now obtainable the building of a span of 2,500 feet for heavy traffic—that of Sydney Harbour Bridge, which he designed, was 1,650 feet—would be quite practicable, and a bridge of the arch or cantilever type on a favourable site would be cheaper than a suspension bridge for spans up to 1,500 feet.

A MILLION HOUSES IN TEN YEARS.

The committee which, under the chairmanship of Lord Amulree, are examining the problem of national housing, have submitted for the consideration of the Government proposals which are intended to develop in more detail the solution outlined in the committee's interim report of May 17. The other members of the committee are:—

Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Mr. E. Beddington Behrens, Sir Basil Blackett, Sir Edgar Bonham-Carter, Mr. Alfred C. Bossom, M.P.; Sir Theodore Chambers, Mr. B. Seebohm Rowntree and Sir Raymond Unwin.

The committee advocate the setting up of a statutory Housing Commission, the first object of which would be to organise building on a 10 years' programme over the whole country through the instrument of local authorities and public utility societies.

In their report the committee state that the housing of the lower-paid workers at rents within their means should be accepted as a national responsibility and a public service. At least 1,000,000 new houses are needed, to be let at inclusive rents of 10s. a week and under. This need should be met within 10 years. "The houses that are required," the committee state, "are houses 'to let,' and not houses 'for sale.' The arguments for encouraging those with assured employment and good pay to purchase their homes outright do not apply to the majority of lower-paid or migratory workers."

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE.

The committee conclude that there is no prospect of the need being met through private enterprise building for profit. "We should support the provision of houses for the lower-paid worker by private enterprise," the report continues, "if we thought it were the best and cheapest method of providing houses on the scale indicated, but all the known facts and past experience have shown this not to be a commercial proposition at the rates of interest available for commercial purposes, or through building societies . . . . We conclude that a large effort organised on a national scale is essential, and that the problem will not solve itself if it is left to the free play of supply and demand."

"To sum up," the committee state, "the Housing Commission would become responsible for a national survey of housing needs; would arrange for the supply of labour and materials in the light of long-period requirements; would stimulate research both on general and technical housing problems; would organise public utility societies; would devote attention to the possibility of decentralisation; would supervise and give advice on plans for the large-scale purchase of property for reconditioning; would keep watch on the question of land purchase; would finance local authorities and public utility societies at trustee rates of interest; and would control its whole programme in the light of economic requirements. Thus it would play its part in a national effort to secure the provision of the million new houses in 10 years."

£50,000 LOAN WANTED FOR DUBLIN WORKS.

The Dublin Board of Assistance invite proposals from parties willing to lend £50,000 for reconstruction and equipment of part of the Dublin Union premises.

The loan has been sanctioned by the Minister for Local Government and Public Health, and will be repayable in twenty years. Tenders for £10,000 or any multiple of £10,000 up to the full £50,000 will be considered.

Forms of proposal setting out terms and rate of interest of repayment, and particulars of security, can be had on application to Mr. James E. Condon, Clerk of the Union, 1 James's street, Dublin. These forms must be returned by 31st July.

350 FEET CHIMNEY.

Edinburgh Town Council decided to erect a 350ft.-high chimney at Portobello Power Station at an approximate cost of £50,000. It is hoped that the chimney will disperse into the atmosphere the fumes and grit which at present come from the eight small chimneys of the station and have given rise to many complaints from nearby residents.

2,250,000 HOUSES NEEDED.

The Executive Committee of the Labour Party has restated its housing policy in a pamphlet published to-day with the title "Up with the Houses! Down with the Slums!" The statement will be submitted to the party conference in October for approval. The plan outlined is as follows:—

Parliament to lay down the general lines of housing policy and finance as heretofore.

The Minister of Health to be responsible for the size and speed of the national housing programme and the constituent local programmes and having concurrent powers to undertake local programmes where local authorities are unable, or unwilling, to carry them out.

A National Housing Commission to be responsible for administration and for arranging and ensuring that the programmes are carried out; and, subject to the final responsibility of the Minister, to be the authority for drawing up the programmes in the first instance, in conjunction with the local authorities.

Local authorities to undertake the local programmes if they can and so desire; otherwise the work to be directly undertaken by the commission exercising concurrent powers with the authority and on behalf of the Minister.

Financial assistance, the amount of which cannot be stated in advance. For practical reasons there must be some local financial responsibility if the local authorities are to be responsible for housing operations.

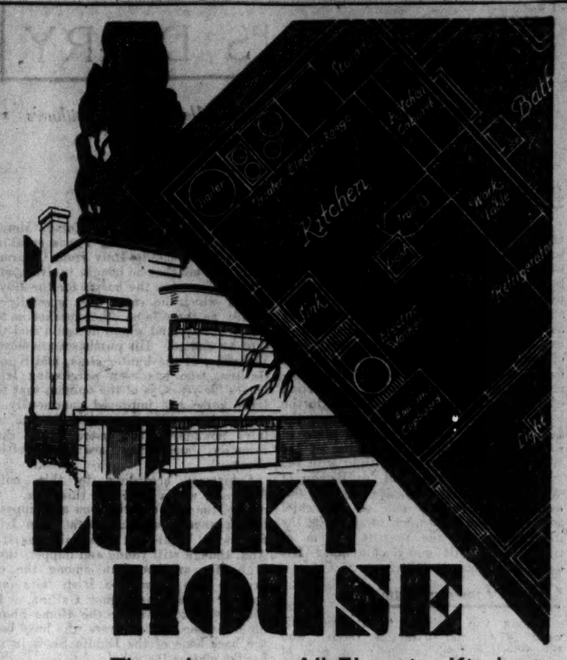

The report states that there is an immediate need of 2,250,000 new houses in Great Britain if each family is to have structurally separate accommodation, if the worst of the existing houses are to be replaced, and the worst features of overcrowding are to be abolished. Between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 new houses may be needed altogether during the next 20 years if the modern standards contemplated by the report are adopted. Nothing will have speedier results in raising the standard of life, the report says, than the decent housing of the nation.

Answering the question: "Who will build the houses?" the report says the root of the problem is the building of ordinary new houses at low rents, and that to build on the scale required is beyond the capacity of private enterprise. The continuous programme contemplated by the report would demand (it says) a nation-wide organisation with a central direction which can plan and co-ordinate local housing programmes, labour supply, and the production and distribution of materials, and which can control costs. "Only public authorities can do the job, in the way it must be done—comprehensively, speedily, and efficiently." It should be possible to maintain, apart from private building, a national programme for Great Britain averaging 250,000 to 300,000 a year, of which 40,000 should be for Scotland.

CONCRETE HOUSE FOR £193.

A concrete house with tiled roof which has been completed at Coolaw in Mr. J. Shortall's (engineer) district for the Wexford County Board of Health was erected for £193 3s. 2d. The engineer claims that this is the cheapest house of its type built under a public authority in the Free State. Last year a cottage built under the supervision of Mr. G. Flood, engineer in his area under the Health Board, cost £201, and at the time it was completed it was the cheapest house of its kind built under similar conditions.

At the meeting of the Health Board Mr. Shortall furnished a detailed statement of the cost of the Coolaw house, which included as wages £28 for mason, slater and plasterer, £20 for carpenter, and £15 for labourer. The house had cavity walls and the roof cost included £6 for a sheeted and felted roof under the tiles, which insulated the roof and made it waterproof. This was an extra item. As against this, there was £4 10s. not included in the cost, but which it is estimated would be the cost of an entrance gate with piers to be yet erected.

HOW A HOUSING SUBSIDY WAS LOST.

As a result of the prolonged stoppage of work on housing schemes in Glasgow in consequence of the plasterers' strike, Glasgow Town Council are faced with a loss of subsidy estimated at over £250,000.

Sir Godfrey Collins, the Secretary of State for Scotland, has written to the Town Clerk stating that he cannot see his way to advise the further legislation necessary to extend the period for the completion of houses under the Housing Act of 1924, in connection with which a subsidy of £9 per house for forty years, was granted.

The period during which houses erected under the Act had to be completed expired on June 30, and after that a subsidy of only £3 per house could be obtained. As nearly 2,000 houses were unfinished in the city at the termination of the period, Sir Godfrey's decision is expected to involve an extra expenditure in Glasgow of over £250,000.

A WIDER PROMENADE.

Visitors to the Isle of Man for their holidays this season will find that the Douglas promenade has been much changed and greatly improved. its width has been more than doubled. The surface of the promenade is laid out in black, brown and green anti-glare asphalting, and there are five sunken gardens and a children's yachting pool.

The first promenade was built in Douglas in 1868 by public subscription, and the Loch Parade, which has just been widened, was opened in 1874. The work was undertaken mainly to relieve unemployment among seasonal workers. The old promenade was 80ft. wide; the new one is 180ft., including a 45ft. roadway and a 25ft. footway alongside the sea. Between the roadway and the footway are the sunken gardens, sheltered by walls of native stone. The sea wall is built of concrete blocks, faced with granite, and is 21ft. above the shore.

CONTRACTOR WITHDRAWS.

Roscommon Board of Health received a letter from Mr. Peter Finan, Canamore, Castlerea, who wrote:—"I regret to inform you that owing to high cost of labour in Castlerea, I am not in a position to carry out the building of cottages, etc., I tendered for on May 5th, 1934. I understood labourers would be got for £1 10s. per week, and instead the wages are £2 per week. I am very sorry if I have caused any inconvenience to the Board of Health, but the matter is too serious for me."

The Board ordered:—

"That as the tender of Peter Finan for the building of the 20 houses in Castlerea, which was accepted by us at the May meeting, is now withdrawn, Mr. Finan refusing to sign his bond, we hereby accept the next lowest tender, that of Messrs. Hession Bros., Roscommon, at £5,030, less £250, credit for materials in ex-workhouse. Houses to be of plan type 69, concrete walls and slated roofs. Peter Finan to forfeit his deposit of £10."

£30,000 ELECTRIC EXCAVATOR.

The largest electric excavator ever manufactured in Europe is now being erected at Corby, Northamptonshire, for use at the rolling mill plant which Stewarts and Lloyds, Limited, tube manufacturers, are constructing there for the production of steel tubes.

The excavator is to be used in the fields adjoining the works for stripping to a depth of 50ft. to 75ft. the soil or overburden which covers the iron ore needed to feed the huge furnaces of the rolling mills. The machine, which is also known as a stripping shovel, is capable of moving some 500 tons of earth an hour. With it earth can be dug, lifted, rotated, and dumped.

The unusual size of the excavator is indicated in the facts that the jib is 100ft. long; the bucket which scoops out the earth weighs 12 tons, has a capacity of 9 cubic yards, and is capable of holding a full-size saloon car; the handle on which the bucket hangs weighs 15 tons and is 65ft. long; there is a counter-balance weight of 100 tons of pig iron; a turntable 35ft. in diameter; and the whole machine is 80ft. high. It will be worked by electrical energy from the Grid system, and can be controlled by one man.

The excavator is to cost approximately £30,000. Some 350 tons of British steel were absorbed in its manufacture, and it will make possible employment for hundreds of men under the Corby development scheme.

St. Swithun's Day.

To-morrow will be St. Swithun's Day, and most people, whether or not they believe in the popular superstition that the weather of the day gives an indication of that to follow for the next forty days, will take a passing note of the rain or its absence. The records of the observatory at Greenwich have long since disposed of any ground for the belief that forty days of rain or sunshine will follow the rain or sunshine of St. Swithun's Day, but superstition dies hard, and a great proportion of our population stick tenaciously to the legend. Bishop Swithun, after whom the day is named, has an obscure place in religious history. Egbert, King of the West Saxons, entrusted Swithun with the education of his son, and, as Bishop of Winchester in the middle of the 9th century, he became one of the chief advisers of the Crown. He was one of the inaugurators of the present system of tithes, and built many churches. His death took place in 862.

Colonel Jameson Davis.

Among the visitors to Ireland this week is Colonel Jameson Davis, who formerly belonged to the great firm of Messrs. S. and A. G. Davis, of Enniscorthy. His mother was a Miss Jameson, and her sister was the mother of Marquis Marconi, the inventor of wireless. Colonel Jameson Davis says that the Jameson family came from Scotland. There were three brothers, John, William and Andrew. John and William settled in Dublin, and started the well-known distillery there. Andrew Jameson came to County Wexford, and started a distillery at Fairfield, Enniscorthy, which is still known as "The Still." Father Mathew's crusade very much injured the local sale of whiskey. There was a fire at Fairfield, and after that Andrew Jameson gave up distilling. Some time previous to the fire the Devereux firm, of Wexford, had offered him £40,000 for the place and good-will, but he did not consider that sufficient. He broke up the plant and sent it by horse-traction to Dublin for sale. Andrew Jameson had a couple of sons and six daughters. One of his daughters married Colonel Jameson Davis's father, another married Mr. Cookman, Monart, and the youngest married Signor Marconi. She had two sons, the younger being Marquis Marconi.

Talking of heredity, Colonel Jameson Davis said: "When I was a young man the premier bootmaker in Enniscorthy was a man named Pounder. I went to him to be measured for a pair of boots, and, after he had taken the measurements, he took down a book in which he kept a record of the measurements of previous customers, and told me it was a remarkable fact that there was not a pin's point of difference in the measurements of my grandfather's foot and my own."

Mr. Schleisinger.

I hear Mr. Schleisinger, the South African millionaire, has arrived in London from Cape Town, and will be among the Horse Show visitors here next month. He is accompanied by Mrs. Schleisinger, who is an Irish lady. She was before her marriage Miss McDonald, a member of the Daly of Dunsandle family of Galway, and is aunt to Lady Tichborne. It will be recollected that Mr. Schleisinger was here last August along with Mr. C. N. Havenga. Both lunched with President de Valera and some of his Ministers at Leinster House. At that time it was said that these two distinguished South African visitors had hoped to effect a solution of the existing political dispute between England and the Free State; but nothing happened. Mr. Havenga has since been very ill, and is not likely to be in London this year. Mr. Schleisinger is really an Austrian, but has spent his life in South Africa. He is keenly interested in Ireland and Irish country life.

Horses for Italy.

Signor Gallina, of the Corso, Montevicchio, Turin, to whom I was speaking on his way back to Italy from Cahirmee Fair, told me that he bought twelve horses there. These are the horses for the Royal Guard which he came over specially to secure, as there is no other market in the world but Ireland where he could find the type he wanted. His purchases are mostly 17 hands, of the hunter class, and Signor Gallina, who has been purchasing Irish horses for years, is of the opinion that the Irish horse has improved enormously in recent times. The types you find in the fairs nowadays show more blood than formerly, and they are not getting cheaper!

Cahirmee, according to this noted foreigner, was a good fair this year. Of course, the first question you are supposed to ask anyone who has been to an Irish fair is: "What sort of a fair was it?" And, though still young and dapper, there is hardly another man among the old brigade who knows the Irish fairs and Ireland as well as Signor Gallina. He will be back again for the Horse Show; for he is one of the buyers who have been the back-bone of the Dublin Show in the hunter classes for years.

An Educational Expert.

The other day I happened to meet in Dublin the capable Secretary to the Ministry of Education of Northern Ireland, Mr. A. N. Bonaparte-Wyse, M.A., who was taking advantage of the "Twelfth" holiday in the North to visit his beautiful home at Blackrock. Though not many years from the retirement age, Mr. Wyse, I was glad to see, is as hale and as vigorous as ever, and, as usual, full of schemes for the advancement of education. Few Irish administrators have as delicate a responsibility as he has. The direction of educational services in the Six County area is a thorny task for any administrator, and the fact that Mr. Bonaparte-Wyse happens to be a Catholic does not lighten his burden. The years of service spent by Mr. Wyse under the old Commissioners of National Education were fruitful of good for Irish education, North and South, and the benefits of many of the schemes initiated by him are still being reaped in the Free State, and notably that "brainwave" of an arrangement whereby secondary teachers get their basic salaries from the colleges and their increments from the State. This arrangement was suggested by him at the time of "MacPherson" Education Bill in 1920, and is now in operation North and South. The much-admired vocational school in connection with Messrs. Jacob's biscuit factory was established under his wise guidance nearly twenty years ago.

King's Ale.

King's Ale has revenged itself upon its tormentors! On July 9th a paragraph appeared in this column stating that Mr. James Pim, of Mountmellick, had sent Mr. Findlater one of his store of thirty-three bottles. Information has now come to hand that Mr. Pim died in 1849, some sixty years before King Edward's visit to the brewery! My correspondent suggests that only Sir Oliver Lodge can explain how the spirit of Bass passed and re-passed through the body-line of the ethereal meridian without any of the corks flying into the Milky Way. Fortunately, however, there is no need to trouble the learned scientist, since an eminently satisfactory explanation of the phenomenon has already been suggested to me. The ethereal meridian was so saturated with bottles that the Spirits of Bass determined to retain their corks, lest the exhalation of their odours might curdle the Milky Way!

HEALTH INSURANCE BENEFITS.

DELAYS CAUSED BY SUBSCRIBERS.

In reply to complaints of delay in the payment of sick and disablement benefit, the secretary of the Unified National Health Insurance Society states that where there has been any delay, it has been due to subscribers failing to observe the instructions sent out by the society.

"All the delays we have experienced have been experienced through certificates being sent in without either the subscriber's name or number. We are put to considerable trouble and expense in trying to trace these people.

"Normally, we have to handle 17,000 cards weekly. This week, so far, we have 13,000 cases of benefit paid, and delay has occurred in not more than 5 per cent. of the total number of payments dealt with.

"Notices were sent out to over 300,000 insured members in June last, and, if they have not noted their new number, they can have their interests attended to by quoting the name of their old society and their number."

TRINITY COLLEGE NOTES.

THE END OF THE YEAR.

THE BOAT CLUB AT HENLEY.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

THE academic year has drawn to an end, and the University has entered once again upon the "deep sleep" of the Long Vacation. Only the tireless workers of the secretarial staff of the College and the porters who guard the gates remain to preserve the life of the University during the vacation months, when fellows, professors and students rest from their labours. Not until October 1st next, when Michaelmas Term begins, as well as the Moderatorship examination, shall the University resume its normal life once more.

The announcement of the results of the entrance scholarship and sizarship examinations is the most interesting news of the week. Most of the exhibitioners came from Dublin schools, the two most valuable scholarships being awarded to students from Mountjoy School and Wesley College, while the other nine are divided among the High School (2), Kingstown Grammer School (2), St. Andrew's College, St. Columba's College, the King's Hospital, Wesley College, and Campbell College, Belfast. Of the eighteen sizarships awarded no less than five were won by candidates from Mountjoy School, after preliminary training at other schools. The five Reid sizarships, which are awarded to natives of Kerry, are divided among candidates who were educated at the following schools:—The King's Hospital, Dublin; St. Michael's College, Listowel (2); Mount St. Joseph, Roscrea, and St. Brendan's Seminary, Killarney.

MEDICAL PRIZES.

The medical prize examination, issued last week, include the following names—The Fitz-Patrick Scholarship (awarded annually to the student who obtains the highest aggregate marks at Part II. of the Intermediate and Parts I. and II. of the final Medical examination), to Mr. F. M. Hanna, M.B., house surgeon at the Adelaide Hospital; the Stewart Medical Scholarship in Physics, Chemistry, Botany and Zoology, to Mr. S. Sevitt; the John Mallet Purser Medal, to Mr. J. E. Gillespie, for first place in Physiology and Histology at the Intermediate Medical (Part I.); the De Renzy Centenary Prize, to Miss A. M. E. McCabe, M.B., and Mr. A. J. O'Connor, M.B., who tied for first place at the D.P.H. examination; the Aquila Smith Prize, to Mr. D. T. Bardon and Mr. Cecil Mushatt, for the highest marks obtained at the final Medical examination (Part I.); and the W. G. Smith Prize, for first place at a Class Honor examination, to Mr. G. B. Jackson. The Cunningham Memorial Medal and Prize, for first place in anatomy at the Intermediate Medical (Part I.) examination, has been awarded to Mr. G. N. MacFarlane.

Consequent on the recent appointments (already announced) to the two most important Chairs in the School of Law, the following changes in the Lecturerships of the school have been notified:—

The title of the Lecturer in Civil Law and General Jurisprudence will be changed to Lecturer in Roman Law, and at an early date in the coming year the Board will appoint a new lecturer, to be called the Lecturer in General Jurisprudence, with the duty of giving Law School and Honor Lectures in jurisprudence, international law, legal history and public administration. The appointment in this case will be a whole-time one. The remaining member of the staff will be the Reid Professor of Penal Legislation, Constitutional and Criminal Law, and the Law of Evidence, to be elected next year in succession to Professor Ashley Powell, M.A., whose term of office will then expire. The Reid Professor is appointed for a term of five years on the result of an examination, and must be a member of the Irish Bar (either in the Irish Free State or Northern Ireland) and a graduate (not honorary) in Arts or in Law of any university.

SCIENCE RESEARCH.

The Science Research Scholarship, offered annually by the trustees of the Royal Commission for the Exhibition of 1851, has been awarded this year to Miss Joyce Parkinson Hill (Sch.), Mod.B.A., M.Sc. Miss Hill has had a brilliant academic career, being a Scholar and First-class Moderator in Natural Science. She was Record Secretary to the University Experimental Science Association last year.

The President of the Experimental Science Association for the forthcoming year will be Miss Ruth Patten, B.A., M.Sc. Miss Patten, who has the honour to be the first woman-President of the Association, is the Assistant to the Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy, and is the Vice-Warden of Trinity Hall.

The distinction of Fellowship in the Royal College of Surgeons of Ireland has been won by Miss Margaret Gregg, B.A., M.B., who was a former brilliant medical student in Trinity College. Miss Gregg was Hudson Memorial Scholar of the Adelaide Hospital, where she was successively house surgeon and house physician. She was afterwards appointed to the staff of the Women's Hospital, Birmingham, and the Rotunda Hospital, Dublin. Her distinction, which will give pleasure to her many friends in the University, is notable from the fact that only one other woman has been elected to Fellowship of the Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland.

SPORT.

The Swimming Club, the Boat Club and the Cricket Eleven are the only clubs that are still functioning in College. The former are in the running for head of the Leinster Senior League Water Polo Championship, while the latter have just returned from a North of Ireland cricket tour. Mr. I. E. Cope has been selected to play for Ireland against the M.C.C. at Derry—he performed the "hat-trick" against Queen's University, Belfast.

The Boat Club have added to their Henley laurels by winning the Leander Grand Challenge Cup at the Cork Regatta, in spite of difficulties caused through the breaking of an oar by one of the crew.

GARDEN FETE AT MONKSTOWN CASTLE.

A garden fête and gymkhana in aid of the Kingstown Branch of the Life-boat Institution will be held on Saturday, 28th July, in the grounds of Monkstown Castle, Monkstown, County Dublin, lent for the occasion by Dr. and Mrs. D. De Courcy Wheeler. The attractions include a horse and pony gymkhana, an "all-sorts-of-dog" show, in which Lieutenant-Colonel Adye Curran, Captain W. Webb, Mr. C. F. Heney and Mr. J. W. Heney are interesting themselves, and a novel performance by the pupils of Miss Thelma Murphy's School of Dancing. A number of stalls will be in charge of Mrs. Seton Pringle, Mrs. Grove-White, Mrs. Maurice Walker and Mrs. David Barry. There will also be a "tiny tots' parade" or "baby show."

VITAL STATISTICS.

During the week ended 7th July there were born in the City of Dublin 123 boys and 150 girls, representing a rate of 30.3 per 1,000 of the population.

The number of deaths registered was 91—41 males and 50 females—representing a rate of 9.8 per 1,000. There were three deaths from the principal epidemic diseases, comprising one from typhoid fever and two from whooping cough. There were no deaths from typhoid fever recorded for the three preceding weeks. Tuberculous disease caused 15 deaths, 14 of which were from pulmonary tuberculosis and one from tuberculous meningitis. Nine deaths were caused by cancer and eleven by diseases of the heart.

In the Borough of Dun Laoghaire the birth-rate was 13.1 and the death-rate 5.8 per 1,000.

In Cork County Borough the birth-rate was 22.6 and the death-rate 9.3, while in Limerick the birth-rate was 27.8 and the death-rate 18.5.

Dublin was the only part of the country where typhoid fever was reported.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

IRISH UNITY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I was very much afraid that the article by "An-t-Ultach" on the unity of Ireland was going to be allowed to sink into your files without as much as a bubble on the surface of your Correspondence Columns to mark its disappearance, and would have cheered to see Messrs. MacDermot and Walker diving to the rescue.

The Irish race is essentially conservative, and Mr. Walker is right in describing Republicanism as alien to its genius. It is simply the form which an un-Christian and groundless hatred of England has taken. That Ireland has had cause to hate England in the past I admit, but the English who did the wrong, and the Irish who suffered it, have long gone to their account, and between the Ireland and the England of to-day there is no reasonable cause of quarrel. The sad and bitter doings of the past twenty years we may discount. They were the result of the ancient feud, and not fresh ground for ill-feeling.

Granted, however, whatever the reason, that there is in the Free State to-day a strong body of Republican opinion, what, reduced to its simplest terms, is the issue which the Republican in the Free State has to face? It is this, which is preferable—a Republic and an indefinite postponement of Irish unity or unity with the possibility of a Republic for the whole country in course of time. Were I a Republican—which I am not—I should certainly place the achievement of the high and essential ideal of national unity first. Most of us will agree with "An-t-Ultach," in spite of Mr. MacDermot, that the setting up of a twenty-six county Republic would be a disaster, and Mr. MacDermot may yet have reason to regret his admission of the opposite point of view.

One thing is certain—that the government of this island cannot be satisfactorily carried on under the present conditions. On each side of the accursed border a triumphant majority lords it over a disgruntled, helpless minority of a different religious and political outlook. Until the country is united, and a reasonable balance between Government and Opposition thereby secured, oppressive and hurried legislation, instead of legislation based upon the natural evolution of political thought under the influence of changing circumstances, is bound to continue.

As for the relations between Ireland and the Empire, let all parties accept the status quo till the essential thing—the abolition of partition—is attained. There is nothing derogatory to national dignity in accepting complete and unfettered independence within the British Commonwealth of Nations, especially for Ireland, which has had so large a share in its making and administration. If a united Ireland, however, decided to go out of it the minority would not object, even though they considered that in doing so we were disowning the greatest work which Irishmen have done for the world.—Yours, etc.,

ERNEST M. BATEMAN.

The Rectory, Mount Merrion avenue, Blackrock, Co. Dublin, July 13th, 1934.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Mr. Walker's X-ray way of looking into the Irish political situation and his power and charm of expression are an immense help to all who are giving thought and good-will to this problem.

He is quite right when he says the Irish people want monarchical freedom. Every nation is one big family. Republic is foreign to the nature of a true nation. There is only one Republic; and it is not in this world. A Kingdom within the Commonwealth would be the free choice of the Irish people.—Yours, etc.,

P. J. NOLAN.

21 South Lotts road, July 13th, 1934.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Having read the correspondence re Irish unity, I write a few hurried lines before returning to Belfast.

May I ask why there is all this anxiety to bring Northern Ireland into the so-called Free State? Northern Ireland is British, and will remain British for all time. It has nothing to gain by fusion with the Free State, and all to lose, including honour.

It will be well for those who are anxious for Irish unity to read the many speeches of our leaders on the occasion of the 12th July parades. As Lord Craigavon has said, "Ulster is ours," and it will remain ours, and any attempt to persuade Northern Ireland to unite with the South by means of "blarney" will be received with a smile; while, should any form of force be attempted, Ulster will resist to the last man with his back to the wall, for the motto is "No surrender."

Free State patriots will be well advised to put their own house in order and leave Ulster alone.—Yours, etc.,

THOMAS K. TURPIN

(Finaghy Park, North, Belfast).

Hotel Ivanhoe, 8 Harcourt street, Dublin, C. 19, July 13th, 1934.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The great vitality of this Kingdom of Ireland, which enabled it to survive partition, was also shown at the time of the Union, when it remained intact, while the Kingdom of Scotland, and even that of England herself, both lost their identities at the time of their union and were merged in the Kingdom of Great Britain.

The Scottish Privy Council was also abolished in 1708, the year after that union, and her Chief Secretary besides about the middle of the eighteenth century, so that she had then no Executive of her own, and the Lord Advocate took over the control of any Scotch business after that.

Ireland, however, as a Kingdom herself, had her own Executive after the Union, with a Privy Council and a Viceroy to act with it as such.

It might yet be possible for one person to act as Governor-General for both Northern and Southern Ireland by giving him the double commission without any change of procedure; while if the two Senates would also consent to sit in joint session, alternately in Dublin and Belfast, they would then discuss together whatever business the two Governments had in common without interference with any of the other machinery of government now in existence.

Whether it would be possible to link up the two legal systems is another matter, yet Ireland may have lost more of her own particular identity since partition than in all the years between that and the Union.—Yours, etc.,

JOHN BURTON.

WATER SHORTAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The latest communiqué from the water front opens another scene in the merry comedy of "codding the consumer." The usual threats of terrible and immediate thirst, but not a word of apology on behalf of whomever is supposed to be responsible for providing a satisfactory water supply, and has failed to do so.

For several years past we have had the annual official scare about shortage of water, but in the meantime nothing has been done to give the citizens water as and when they want it. After all, one does not pay rental for a hose to water the garden in winter.

As I understand the matter, about thirty years ago it was found that the main reservoir at Roundwood was inadequate, and, after careful consideration, a second reservoir was constructed there some twenty years ago at a cost of hundreds of thousands of pounds. At the time no additional pipes were laid to bring the extra water to the service reservoir at Stillorgan. Owing to the growth of the city and the sale of water to townships, it became evident some five years or so back that the pipes from Roundwood could no longer provide an adequate supply during hot weather spells, when, naturally, there is greater demand for water. Still, nothing was done, and the situation was allowed to get worse from summer to summer.

Admittedly, laying an additional pipe from Roundwood to Stillorgan would be costly; but it seems great waste to be unable to use the full capacity of the second Roundwood reservoir. Further, it is not beyond the resources of engineering to fit a series of pumps on the existing mains to increase their output without imposing appreciable additional strain on the pipes.

The project of a combined electricity and water supply from the Liffey, as and when either, or both, may be required is very attractive, but it brings to mind the story of the ingenious student who conceived the idea of making his breakfast tea at night and storing it in a Thermos flask, which he proposed to use as a hot water bottle. In any case, the Liffey project, which cannot come to fruition for several years, is no valid excuse for refusing the Dublin citizens their right—an ample supply of pure water when they want it.—Yours, etc.,

"WELL-WELL."

Daily Programme Review.

TO-DAY.

DUBLIN: Recital, Ida Gilbert, with Orchestra, 9.5.

BELFAST: Ravenhill Temperance Flute Band, 6.45.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: The London Zigeuner Band, 7.

LONDON & WEST REGIONAL: The London Symphony Orchestra, 8.

SCOTTISH REGIONAL: Patriotic Programme, 8.15.

RADIO PARIS: Opera, "Le Devin du Village" (Rosseau), 8.30.

STRASBOURG: Metz Municipal Band and Choir, 8.30.

THE London Symphony Orchestra when playing to-night will be under the direction of Julius Harrison. A programme of very satisfying music has been arranged, including Debussy's "Prélude à l'après-midi d'un Faune," always a welcome piece, and "A Night on the Bare Mountain," which is a tone-poem of Mussorgsky. It depicts eerie doings on a night which folklore of many lands associate with unholy things. Amid the satanic revels, unearthly voices are heard, but with the coming of daylight the spirits of darkness disappear, and the music finishes with a deep feeling of peace.

Debussy's delicate work is the other extreme in form and subject. It pictures an afternoon in the life of a Faun. Therefore, the music is stately and restful, and yet suggests the gambollings of a beautiful creature in sunlight and shade. Works by Tchaikovsky, Grainger and Greig are also in the same programme.

To-night, in the third of the "Contemporary Composers of the North" series, the concert will be devoted to the music of Edward Isaacs, the noted Manchester-born composer and pianist. He will play some of his own pianoforte compositions on this occasion, which is Mr. Isaacs's fifty-second birthday. The other soloists are Henry Holst (violin), who will co-operate with the composer in the Sonata in A, and Graham Clifford, the well-known baritone, who will be responsible for the vocal items (North Regional, 8).

There are two shorter items of importance to which attention should be drawn. A recital to be given by Samuel Dushkin (violin) and Beveridge Webster (pianoforte), who will play Mozart's Sonata in A and Introduction and Variations on an original theme by Schubert, occurs in the London and Scottish Regional programme at 9. At the same hour from West Regional, a relay will be taken from Dartington Hall, Totnes, where the Griller String Quartet are playing.

The Hon. Treasurer reported that during the quarter the finances were increased by the efforts of Miss Trumbull, who raised £40 by a raffle, and Mrs. Stewart £10 5s., proceeds of concert.

Mrs. Lloyd reported that 455 garments were distributed, and mentioned that Mrs. and Miss Wintle had made and collected 515 articles.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. and Miss Wintle, Miss Moses, Mrs. Tomlinson and Mrs. Groves for the clothes they kindly made.

An appeal was made for second-hand clothing.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

History as a Natural Phenomenon.

The Stress of Hardship, the Stimulus of Conflict.

A Study of History. By Arnold J. Toynbee. Volumes I.-III. The Oxford University Press. London: Milford. 52/6 net. (21/- apiece for separate volumes.)

TRULY a prodigious work has been undertaken by Dr. Toynbee, seeing that his "Study of History," when complete, will fill thirteen volumes. The present volumes are of more than 400 closely printed pages apiece, with an immense mass of footnotes, appendices, indices and other apparatus. The contents have been delivered largely as lectures, and bear the marks of oral discursiveness here and there; but the documentation is so heavy that one marvels that a single writer is responsible for the whole.

The purpose of this undertaking is to survey human history thoroughly, and to draw out a philosophy which will explain its phenomena. Since the World War the philosophy of history has engaged many of the best minds in all nations. The feeling is universal that we stand at the end of an age; that our past institutions never will last into the future, and that time to come, for better or worse, will see humanity transformed. Sober judgments have favoured views that would be counted fantastic before the War. Some proclaim the imminent downfall of civilisation; some conceive mankind reduced to the strange servility of ants, with whole cities built underground through fear of aerial attack; some anticipate a swift supremacy of coloured men. Communism bids for a mechanical order, with an end to private life and supernatural religion. Dictatorships rule three-quarters of Europe with a tyrannic thoroughness never conceived in antiquity. Amid so perplexing a state of world affairs, has history any lessons that will aid mankind?

Dr. Toynbee's book gives no conclusive answer at its present stage. He deals, in these three volumes, chiefly with origins, or with things long past. His first volume is merely introductory; profoundly interesting, indeed, and full of instruction, but merely whetting the appetite for that comprehensive study that is to follow. The second volume discusses the "Geneses of Civilisations," and the third the "Growths of Civilisations." It is in the fourth and fifth that the breakdowns and disintegrations will be considered, while subsequent volumes will concern universal States and Churches, rhythms in history, and "The Prospects of Western Civilisation." It is these later volumes that we would like to read to-day, when Europe is creaking.

Argumentum ad Animal.

Dr. Toynbee is a scientific writer. Historians of Victorian days would be amazed if they were invited to explain national phenomena by the analogy of the animal kingdom. Consider industrialism, with the reduction of the individual's liberty, its extreme specialisation of function, its congestion of the race, its ruthlessness. Dr. Toynbee goes to insect societies, to bees and ants, to discover the natural principles which industrialism obeys. He considers that rudimentary reason created the marvels of insect industrialism, and he argues that human evolution, in this particular, can be foreseen by insect example.

Is it legitimate, is it orthodox, thus to view human history as a part of natural history? The answer should be deferred until Dr. Toynbee's use of his material and method has been examined. If his method yields results which experience confirms, must it not be regarded as a proven hypothesis? On the whole, his case bears scrutiny well. Analogy between men and the lower creatures often has been used by classical writers—races swarm like bees, rove like packs of wolves, fight like lions, and so forth. What earlier writers treated as mere analogy, Dr. Toynbee treats as a natural relation; and the present reviewer thinks, with reservations, that the new view is justified by its results.

The Secret of Progress.

On the other hand, Dr. Toynbee differs from the many scientific writers of our time who discard the classical outlook altogether. He uses science, but is not its slave; rather does he advance, logically, from the classical method of survey and deduction to his grand synthesis, his view of history as a natural phenomenon, with free will as a light that moves hither and thither through the storm.

Thus, even without recourse to biology and kindred sciences, Dr. Toynbee's conclusions would be much the same, only not so cogent. He looks at the rise of civilised powers, and asks what causes, or encourages, such a phenomenon. Is race, some quality of blood, the secret of progress? Is environment the secret? He notes, and proves with a score of powerful arguments, that ease is antagonistic to progress. Great achievements come under the stress of hardship, the stimulus of blows, pressure, conflict. Otium, Catulle, tibi molestum est. When civilisations conquer their difficulties they relapse.

Again and again man has won the desert; has built sublime temples and powerful cities in the reclaimed wilderness, and has become unmanned by his own success. Wild Nature has reconquered. Cities there are which the jungle has swallowed; the ivy tears their mighty stones apart. We are back, thus, to the classical view, the ancient experience.

The Nemesis of Nationalism.

Dr. Toynbee does not agree with Herr Spengler, apparently, in his opinion as to the inevitability of rise and fall of cultures, through a uniform series of phenomena. His "Study" is a happy corrective of the depressing Determinism of the German philosopher. On the other hand, he, too, in his analysis of growth, makes a claim for uniformity which it is hard not to regard as the theorist's craving for tidiness: we refer to his chapter on "Analysis of Growth," wherein he traces similarity in a big number of diverse careers.

Dr. Toynbee has some extremely interesting notes on isolated phenomena. For us his extensive treatment of Irish history has suggestive interest. He writes of a "Far Western Christian Culture" that was lost to the world when the Celtic churchmen were defeated in the Roman controversy of the seventh century (contentious ground), and has a remarkable passage on the plantation of Ulster. He considers that the attainment of self-government in Ireland has put an end to the distinctive Irish tradition, since the Free State has adopted the political institutions of its neighbours, and has become simply an autonomous unit in the uniform series of units which make up the present-day Western civilisation. Nationalism has died of its own triumph, in his judgment—an odd and challenging proposition which we would like to see debated in the milieu of a Gaelic college or on Lough Derg!

THE PUBLISHERS' CLOSE SEASON.

MR. LE ROUX ON THE GAELIC LEAGUE.

SHORT STORIES.

THE close season is upon us, the season in which the publisher ceases from publishing, and the English newspapers which print ten or eleven pages of book reviews every week are forced to go back over the books of March and April in order to fill up their space. I have often wondered why this close season exists. There is another one about Christmas time, but that can be explained easily enough by the fact that a publisher, like every other employer, must give his men a holiday. But the same explanation hardly can apply to the summer breathing-space, and I am constrained to inquire into the publisher's motive. Is it that he wants a holiday himself, or is it that he sees no purpose in issuing books when nearly all of his prospective purchasers are themselves away on holiday? And if the latter, does nobody buy books while on holiday? (Here I am speaking from the English point of view; for Irish people abroad cannot dare to buy books, lest they be taken from them at the Customs on return, so that the question does not arise in our case.) Perhaps, there is a simpler explanation, and I shall be grateful to the publisher who takes the trouble to point it out to me.

* * * * *

If so, I hope he will ease my soul quickly; for, if present indications are any evidence, the problem may not exist in another year or two. I notice an increasing tendency among publishers to pull a quick one on their rivals by pushing an occasional important book on the market during the close season. Looking over the lists of publications received by this newspaper, I perceive, for example, that "Anthony Adverse" was hurled upon an unsuspecting, but delighted, public almost immediately after Christmas week, when most of the publishers were still enjoying their three weeks' siesta; and "Anthony Adverse" was no failure. Who can say what will not appear to lighten the darkness of the current month?

Louis Le Roux.

LOUIS LE ROUX has paid me what I regard as a sadly undeserved tribute in lending me the proofs of his new essay on the Gaelic League: "La Ligue Gaelique: son Origine et sa Mission," to give it its proper title. I have read the little book, which seems to be as straightforward and thoughtful a study of a very interesting movement as could be expected from so stimulating a historian. It will be published shortly by the Nouvelles Editions Bretonnes, and, unless I am a very poor prophet, will not be long without a translator.

Mr. Le Roux tells me that he has bidden farewell to "controversial" subjects. He has two new books on hand, a novel which, to quote his own words, "will tell all I have to say of woman," and an autobiography. My friend is modest. The autobiography, he says, "will be fairly true. It will contain a lot of things seen and little of things done; for I have seen a good deal and done very little." There are quite a number of people in Dublin who would dissent from Mr. Le Roux's claim to have done very little. Few writers have had so varied and interesting a life.

Stories in Bulk.

ANTHOLOGIES of short stories seem to be gaining in popularity. The best value that I have seen for a long time is Hutchinson's "A Century of Creepy Stories," which runs to about a thousand pages and represents more authors than I have cared to count. So many creepy stories, if taken one after another, are apt to pall; but for a bed-side book—for early morning, rather than for late at night, consumption—there are few volumes to better it. It is only on looking through such a collection as this, by the way, that one realises how large a percentage of the best creepy stories centre around haunted bedrooms.

Then there is the collection of "Modern Swedish Short Stories," which Cape is publishing for the Anglo-Swedish Literary Foundation; and Faber and Faber, I see, have challenged the rigidly-minded by issuing a volume entitled "My Naughtiest Story"—every specimen selected by its author. Personally, I doubt if I should have the courage to march into a book-seller's and ask for it, and I cannot imagine a Customs officer refusing to confiscate a book with so alluring a title if he found it in my luggage.

Trotsky.

VICTOR GOLLANCZ announces a mammoth book for the end of August: nothing less than Trotsky's "History of the Russian Revolution" in a single volume of 1,300 pages at the cost of 10/6. The original British edition was in three volumes, and cost 54/- all told. At the new price there ought to be a strong demand for the History. It is not the most fascinating book that I have ever read; but there are magnificent pen-pictures here and there in it, and Trotsky's divagations into political philosophy, such as his appendix on Communism and Nationality, are excellent stuff.

M. C.

The Dream of Oengus.

The Dream of Oengus (Aislinge Oenguso). Edited by the Reverend Francis Shaw, S.J., M.A. Dublin: Browne and Nolan. 3/6 net.

THIS edition of the romantic tale known as "Aislinge Oenguso" has been prepared as an aid to beginners in the study of Old Irish. It is a restored text of the original, as preserved in the single manuscript, MS. Egerton 1782 in the British Museum, and written for the most part in 1517 by scribes of the famous O Maoilchonaire family. The copying of "Aislinge Oenguso" was done by the chief scribe, a son of Seán Mac Toma Ui Mhaoilchonaire. Three other copies were made from his: One in 1746 by Aodh O Dalaigh, which is now in Trinity College, Dublin; a second, now in the Rossmore manuscripts, which was made by Edward O'Reilly, and a third, which is now in the National Library. O'Clery apparently had an earlier and better copy than that from which O Maoilchonaire copied, but this earlier copy has been lost. Müller printed the text in Revue Celtique and Thurneysen in Zeitschrift für Celtische Philologie printed a list of necessary corrections. Father Shaw, for the present edition, has collated all these versions and has given a further list of minor corrections.

It follows that this edition is as complete and as close to the original as is now possible, and that the text, as we find it, is Old Irish "with a very strong leaven of early and late Middle Irish forms." It is excellent material for the beginner in the older language. Its present editor does not exaggerate when he says that it is of more than ordinary interest. "In vivid and striking language, wholly free from that inartistic padding which mars so many later Irish compositions, the story of the quest of the maiden, whose beauty has caused Oengus, the son of the Dagda, to pine and waste away, is told with much literary skill. The medium of dramatic dialogue is used with great effect. The setting of the tale is that strange region, peculiar to early Irish literature, where the mythical blends with the real, and men and gods walk side by side as equal beings. The blending of the real and the unreal is, indeed, personified in the person of Caer Ibormeith, the maiden of Oengus's dream, who, as the story tells us, 'used to be one year in the form of a bird and the next year in human form.'"

MR. LOUIS N. LE ROUX.

In a lengthy introduction the editor deals with the literary connections of the story, its relation to the Táin, Caer Ibormeith, Fingen or Fergne, Conchobar's physician, the manuscript, language and date of the tale, and the method of restoring the text for this edition. In addition, he provides copious notes, a glossary of every word with its location in the book, an index of proper names, and a list of works referred to. He has done a most scholarly and serviceable piece of work.

Shutting Out the Spirit.

The Fear of the Dead in Primitive Religion. Vol. II. By Sir James Frazer. London: Macmillan. 10/6 net.

FEAR that the spirits of the dead will return to their former homes is seldom absent from the mind of primitive man, according to Sir James Frazer. He has collected a mass of evidence from many parts of the world in support of his theory, and this second volume is no less illuminating than the first. What is even better, from the reader's point of view, it is no less readable. Few writers other than Sir James Frazer could have displayed so great a number of facts and examples in so attractive a way.

In his first book Sir James has shown how the spirits are expelled by "fair" means—by providing them with what they are supposed to need in the next world, and by entreating them to stay there. This volume deals with the "foul" means—force or fraud. To prevent the unwelcome return of a spirit the corpse often is tied up, or even, as in the case of vampires, mutilated. Barriers of fire or water are raised against him, and means are taken by which, it is hoped, he may lose his way if he wishes to come back. The civilised practice of drawing the blinds in a house after a death comes from the savage practice of closing all openings that may let the spirit in again. This terror of the supernatural, as the author states, reaches its climax with certain primitive tribes who destroy all property that the dead have left behind, thus reducing the living to a state of perpetual poverty.

The "Boy Orator of Leningrad."

Russian Seesaw. By Baron Michael Budberg. London: Hopkinson. 7/6 net.

HERE is another record of breathless adventure and hairsbreadth escape in revolutionary Russia. The author claims to be a young aristocrat who has seen the Bolshevik revolution from both sides, and has at length got away to England to tell the whole story. Until his tenth year, he says, he was brought up in comfort and luxury. After that his experiences were mostly of starvation and savagery. Through the good offices of his old nurse's son, who had become an influential leader, he obtained employment with the Communists, and learned to work wholeheartedly for international revolution.

Becoming a secretary of the youth organisation, Komsomol, he earned a big reputation as the boy orator of Leningrad. This brought him to revolutionary jobs in Europe and Asia. London, Reval, Hamburg and Cardiff were among the cities reached in his journeying. Falling in with a counter-revolutionary friend of his father's, and worn out by what seemed to him a hopeless conflict between revolution and reaction, he made up his mind to clear out of Russia and give up both his revolutionary and his counter-revolutionary activities, and in this he succeeded after vividly described difficulties.

A Mad World.

His narrative reads like a novel, and many anti-Communistic novels are not nearly as highly-coloured as some portions of this book. If one half of what he says is true, the author must have been a boy of extraordinary spirit, resource and assurance to survive all the terrorism and brutality that he attributes alike to Reds and Whites. The main impression he conveys is of a mad world of drunkenness, vice, murder and sexual debauchery. And now, in Western peace, he reflects, somewhat wistfully: "Of those Russians who lost their country there are many political groups, hostile and mistrustful, and I do not know to which group I rightly belong . . . . I believe that all of them would disown me, and I can only describe myself as a fugitive from Russia."

The "Mad Mullah."

Fabulous Monster. A Life of the Ex-Kaiser. By J. D. Chamier. London: Arnold. 15/- net.

NO devil is quite as black as he is painted, and in the worst days of war propaganda there must have been many who felt that William II. of Germany could not have all the evil qualities attributed to him by writers in the Allied countries. Even Napoleon and Kruger were not regarded as quite so diabolical as William.

That he was much better than his enemies made allowance for is the decided opinion of Mr. Chamier. Strong opponents of the ex-Kaiser will describe his book as a thorough-going and deliberate white-washing. That description is hardly fair: it goes too far. In bare justice to Mr. Chamier it must be said that this biography is a skilful effort in vindication. As a vindication, it is extremely well done. Mr. Chamier has a case to make, and he makes it with moderation and good temper. He begins with William's boyhood, follows his career through manhood and high responsibility, and takes his leave at the moment of the tragic flight into exile.

At every stage Mr. Chamier marshals contemporary authorities and contemporary opinion in support of his main thesis that the Kaiser, from first to last, was judged most unjustly by nearly all Europe. He is wise enough to recognise that the subject of his biography was not without faults, and that sometimes the faults were both great and serious. It was not, however, his faults that made of the Kaiser a bugbear, or that put Germany in the wrong in the eyes of almost the whole world, according to Mr. Chamier's contention. On the contrary, it is argued, the Kaiser was essentially a lover of peace, and in some ways wise beyond his reputation. The real villainy lay not in him, but in the ministers whose influence and power often overbore his better judgment and his better nature. That led to irreparable harm, not only in Germany, but in Europe. When the machinations of statesmen in other European countries are taken into account, according to Mr. Chamier's case, it will be found that there was something resembling a conspiracy against Germany in the Russian and other capitals.

Mr. Chamier, as we have said, presents his case with great skill. It is, however, convincing only upon the arguments with which it is backed up. There are other arguments and other evidence upon which Mr. Chamier does not draw, and from them it cannot be deduced that the Kaiser was so ill-treated and misrepresented as Mr. Chamier makes him out. Nevertheless, Mr. Chamier's biography is well worth reading, and his estimate of the Kaiser's character, achievements and failure is worthy of study. Mr. Chamier is an excellent "devil's advocate," and in this instance he has done his best to give the devil his due.

"Bright Young Things" in East Africa.

Kenya To-day. By Nora K. Strange. London: Stanley Paul. 18/- net.

AFTER an absence of many years Miss Nora K. Strange returns to Kenya, where she spent many of her earlier days. With a critical and searching eye she reviews the colony in detail, and sums up her findings with judicial impartiality. Kenya has changed during the last few years, but in the main those changes are for the better. Going are the "bright young things," whose escapades were fast getting the colony an evil name. A newer, more self-reliant generation is fast growing up, which will be a credit to the land. Also the craze for shooting everything that once bid fair to deprive the country of its game is taking a new form in which the camera "draws the bead" instead of the rifle.

Miss Strange sees trouble ahead with the bazaar Indians and the town natives, whose savagery is thinly concealed by cheap goods, and who are now freed from tribal restraint.

Also she would have the white man walk warily where the civilisation of the aboriginal is concerned. Apart from social questions, she discusses land, farming prospects, and such ills as affect these all-important topics.

An Early Play of D. H. Lawrence.

A Collier's Friday Night. By D. H. Lawrence. London: Secker. 5/- net.

IT would be foolish to look upon "A Collier's Friday Night" as an epoch-making discovery, but the publication of this play, written by D. H. Lawrence when he was twenty-one, is a noteworthy addition to that sequence of work out of which the real Lawrence will emerge when time has smoothed out the tangle of divergent, and often almost hysterical, essays in criticism on his work. As a play, it is artless and diffuse, but the characterisation is typically sure and subtle, and the story is in essence the same as that of "Sons and Lovers." In the play, as in the novel, the main interest centres round the relationship between a mother and her son, and the drunken father and jealous, but adoring, mother are faithfully portrayed. So, too, are the love passages between the young mining folk, but the complexities of the more mature Lawrence's psychology are not here apparent.

New Novels.

The Free Fishers. By John Buchan. Hodder and Stoughton. 7/6 net.

MR. JOHN BUCHAN is invariably readable. He is among the most careful of writers, and he can transform the dullest theme—not that his themes are often dull—into a thing of vitality and interest. Not even his fine writing, however, entirely redeems "The Free Fishers" from the charge of slowness. It opens magnificently with the company of the free fishers, a sort of secret society that originated as a band of smugglers, and has developed into a brotherhood whose ramifications are so far-reaching that its services are demanded on occasions even by statesmen. A member of this company is a Scottish professor, who is sent south on a mission for his university, but is diverted to look after a young friend who is in danger. The plot becomes infinitely complicated—too complicated, perhaps—and towards the end it works up a crescendo of thrilling rides and hairsbreadth escapes. There is real charm in Mr. Buchan's characters—particularly in the professor himself and in the fire-eating Sir Turnour Wyse—and it is a pity that Mr. Buchan has permitted his plot to become a little doughy in the middle.

Twin Born. By Dolf Wyllarde. Stanley Paul. 7/6 net.

Come Home Again. By Jane England. Hurst and Blackett. 7s. 6d. net.

The unusual plot of "Twin Born" concerns the development, psychic and physical, of twin brothers who are separated in early adolescence through an unexpected accident. Each twin represents what the other might have become in similar circumstances. The public schoolboy, Alfred, is sharply contrasted with Arthur, whose life among savage peoples renders him strangely unlike the slightly vitiated product of highly civilised life. Withal there is a strong bond between them, which eventually is to reunite the brothers. The earlier portion of the book is much better than the latter. Interest slackens off, and the love motif is unconvincing. The author has had a good theme, but has failed to develop it sufficiently.

* * * * *

"Come Home Again" is an uninspired story of the trials and vicissitudes of a young married couple and of their happy-go-lucky friends. Alan is sketched in on very conventional lines—artistic, temperamental, a waster and spendthrift, very fond of his wife, but completely egotistical. Lanni adores Alan and her three small boys, but chafes under the discomforts of their very precarious existence. Whether they are living from hand to mouth in a hut or being riotously extravagant in London during Alan's temporary financial success, she is anxious and dissatisfied, and she turns for a brief period towards another man for comfort and consolation. A terrible tragedy in the life of one of their friends pulls her up in time and averts calamity.

Jeremy's England. By T. E. B. Clarke. Long. 7/6 net.

The hero of Mr. T. E. B. Clarke's new novel is a carefree young man about town who adopts the profession of the rolling stone in real earnest. He accepts any job that offers, no matter how unconventional, and we see him through a series of such callings, passing from boxer to gigolo, from bookmaker's clerk to speedway rider, from a public-house "chucker-out" to a tourist's guide. Inevitably, being an attractive and cheerful young man, he falls in love more than once, but romance palls before the glamour of freedom. The author of this novel has a ready wit and a light-hearted philosophy which makes amusing reading of this mild satire on English life and customs.

Queenie Molson. By L. Wynyard Browne. Cobden-Sanderson. 7s. 6d. net.

A Week After Life. By Leo Koenig. Methuen. 7s. 6d. net.

"QUEENIE MOLSON" is a first novel which is almost certain to be widely read and discussed. It is brilliant, daring and cynical—the sort of novel which Mr. Aldous Huxley might have written in his college days. Mr. Wynyard Browne is typical of the exceptionally brilliant university student, with his pungent satire on Church and State, and particularly on education; his smart and often thoughtless witticisms, and his delight in the fine casuistry of argument. A very well drawn character of an English public school boy, a Cambridge graduate with Communist sympathies, and an absurd and rather pathetic unemployed schoolmistress, are the central figures, but there are a good many smart young society people to add sauce to a piquant dish.

"A Week After Life" is yet another Jewish novel to be translated into English. It tells of a typical Jewish family in the East End of London, in the early post-war years, when fortunes were still being made. The author describes in detail the everyday life of the people, especially where it is distinct from that of the Christian. A Shibah, for instance—the seven days of mourning observed by a family after the funeral of one of its members—takes a very central position of interest in the book.

Childhood's Loves. By Jules Romains. Lovat Dickson. 7/6 net.

Via Mala. By John Knittel. Hutchinson. 8/6 net.

THE author of "Childhood's Loves" already is famous as a novelist and playwright, but it may be doubted whether "Childhood's Loves," the third section of his gigantic "Men of Good Will," will add anything to his reputation. In the preface to the first part of the book, published last year, it was stated to be the author's intention to "express collective life," and in this part the student Jallez is brought clearly to the forefront of the story against the background of the Paris streets. Other characters also appear, but it is, in the main, the book of Jallez. In the vast panorama there is no confusion, if the scene be somewhat crowded, so that every character stands out vividly and vitally. What is to be the end of the story only the author yet knows, but it is entrancing to watch the development of his people as they tread their way across "the world's broad plain of battle." In Mr. Warre B. Wells, known in Ireland as an excellent journalist, Mr. Romains would seem to have found an almost ideal translator.

"Via Mala" is the work of a Swiss author who writes in English. It is a grim and forceful story, set in the Alpine glaciers. Jonas Lauretz, a king of brutal bullies, is everything that civilisation is not—but in the end he is murdered at the instigation of his family. When the body is disposed of, it seems as if the murder must remain unsuspected, and the reader almost hopes that it will. Jonas was just the kind of man the world can do without, and the scene in the mountain saw-mill is one that no reader can forget for a long time. This book will suggest "The House with the Green Shutters" and "Hatter's Castle," and it is worthy to rank with these grisly tales. It might, indeed, have been considerably shortened, to its great advantage, but it is a very notable piece of work, which is worthy

FROM THE NORTHERN CAPITAL.

The "Twelfth" : Shipbuilding : The Duke of Abercorn : Aerodromes : Water Shortage : Herring Scarcity.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

THE "Twelfth" demonstrations in the North were longer probably than they have been in recent years. The glorious weather had the effect of turning them into holiday festivals and enabled thousands to accompany the Orangemen on their marches. The tenor of the speeches at most of the meetings took a new form. The danger of returning to Westminster was stressed, and it was made clear that such a course would be as repugnant to the Orange leaders as going into a Free State Parliament. It was declared that if the Northern Parliament were given up and the North returned to direct rule from Westminster it would be merely the first step to absorption in an all-Ireland Parliament, or even a republic. The "Back to Westminster" movement has gained many adherents recently; for it is believed that this is the only way to avoid the financial difficulty of maintaining a separate Parliament in the North under the existing financial arrangements with Great Britain. It is significant that no references were made in the speeches to the hint given by Mr. Pollock, the Northern Finance Minister, recently that he was carrying on important negotiations with the British Government. I learn from a parliamentary authority in close touch with Westminster that the British Chancellor would be willing to amalgamate Northern and British revenue and meet Northern deficits as well as taking all the surpluses, provided the North would have the same standards of local expenditure as in Great Britain. This, however, does not allow for the lower taxable capacity of Northern Ireland. If, however, Northern Ireland accepted such a principle it might be possible to allow a lower standard of local expenditure on, say, education and police than in Great Britain, and meet Northern deficits without calling upon the rate-payers to make these good when income tax, for instance, is reduced. It is an interesting possibility, but at present rate-payers fear that they are gradually being forced upon the British standard of local expenditure without any undertaking from the British Treasury for meeting deficits in Northern revenue.

SHIPBUILDING.

The amount of shipbuilding in operation in Belfast at present is larger than it has been for several years. There are at present thirteen vessels being built in Belfast with an aggregate tonnage of 146,650 tons. In last March there were ten (90,950 tons), and a year ago only four (33,400 tons). The present tonnage under construction in Belfast includes the four Union Castle liners, the keels of which were laid recently, and the H.M.S. Penelope. The total tonnage in all the yards in Great Britain and Ireland is 587,142, so that Belfast has one-quarter of the total. This is mainly due to the facilities offered to shipowners who build in Belfast under the Loans Guarantee Act, which enables them to borrow money from banking and other financial institutions at a lower rate of interest owing to the guarantee of the Northern Government. The new facilities for building tramp steamers offered by the British Government will not apply to Belfast, as Government assistance already exists here.

THE GOVERNOR.

The reappointment of the Duke of Abercorn for a further term of six years as Governor of Northern Ireland has given genuine pleasure to the majority of the people in the North. There are some who hold the view that the position is unnecessary, but, so long as it is regarded as essential, there could be no more popular occupant of Government House than the Duke of Abercorn. The Duke is closely associated with the Northern province, with which his family has been identified for centuries.

NEW AERODROMES.

When the new aerodrome on Lord Londonderry's estate at Newtownards is officially opened next month Northern Ireland will have its first aerodrome for civil aviation. Up to the present civil aircraft and air services have used the Royal Air Force aerodrome at Aldergrove. Not only is this too far from Belfast—about twenty miles—but it is desirable that it should be reserved exclusively for the R.A.F. At the Newtownards aerodrome facilities will be provided for instructional and pleasure flying. Lord Londonderry, the Air Minister, who is a capable pilot, has trained at the Heston aerodrome on Avro cadet training aircraft and also four members of his family. Similar machines will be available at Newtownards. Lord Londonderry is taking a keen personal interest in the development of the Newtownards aerodrome, and at his own expense is providing the first hangar. It is expected that Newtownards may ultimately become the terminus of several air lines crossing the Irish Sea. No further announcement has been made in regard to the establishment of an aerodrome at the Belfast Harbour site. The Harbour Commissioners have requested an eminent firm of aerodrome architects to submit a report upon the project.

THE DROUGHT.

The prolonged drought is causing anxiety in the North, not only to those responsible for the water supply, but also to farmers, who fear that their root crops will be endangered. The hay-making operations have been assisted by the good weather, but root crops, particularly potatoes, are beginning to show signs of the ill-effects of the drought. The Belfast Water Commissioners have issued another warning to the public to use water economically and prevent waste. The question is frequently asked why Belfast should be short of water with an abundant supply in the Silent Valley Reservoir, in the Mourne Mountains. This reservoir contains nearly 300 million gallons, but twelve miles of the conduit that conveys the water to Belfast consists of 36-inch diameter cast-iron pipes, and this portion of the conduit can only permit ten million gallons per day to reach Belfast. This twelve miles of 36-inch pipe is being duplicated. Two hundred men are employed on the task of building the trench, blasting through rock. It will take some months to complete.

HERRING SHORTAGE.

There is a mystery concerning the shortage of herring off the Irish coast this season. In June, 1933, 6,310 cwt. of herring were landed, valued at £4,193, but in the same month this year there was a mysterious fall to 621 cwt., representing only £670. The fishermen have made representations to the Northern Government on the subject, and, without Government help or an immediate improvement in catches, 200 men will have to abandon the industry and seek employment elsewhere. The Government, it is understood, has agreed to give assistance to enable the boats to continue fishing until the end of August. The cause of the present scarcity of herring is baffling the authorities in Northern Ireland, and also in Great Britain and the Isle of Man. One theory is that it is due to a mysterious discolouration of the sea which is due, it is believed, to subterranean disturbance. A thick whitish fluid has been noticed in the vicinity of the usual herring fishing grounds off the County Down coast. Fishermen, however, are inclined to disbelieve this theory, and assert that discolouration is usually followed by the development of small organisms upon which the herring feed. It is possible that the shoals may arrive later, but then the Scottish drifters which land their catches at Ardglass for curing purposes will reap the harvest.

DUBLIN MAN'S SUDDEN DEATH.

INQUEST ADJOURNED.

An inquest on Thomas Brennan (40), 54 Mountjoy square, Dublin, a British Army pensioner, who died at his home on Wednesday night, was opened, and adjourned, by Dr. D. A. MacErlean, City Coroner, at the City Morgue yesterday, insufficient evidence having been taken for the jury to ascertain the cause of death.

Miss Josephine Brennan said that a short time before midnight on Wednesday she was awakened by her brother calling out: "I have taken something; I am dying." He was lying in bed and appeared to have a fit. She sent for a doctor, and shortly afterwards her brother died.

Replying to Inspector O'Callaghan, representing the D.M.G., Miss Brennan stated that she had noticed a bottle containing a white crystalline powder in her brother's room, but understood that it was connected with the developing of photographs. Mr. Brennan, who had lost his leg in the Great War, had often remarked that he would be better off dead, but had never suggested committing suicide. A cup had been found beside him, but he always had a drink of water by his bed.

Inspector O'Callaghan said that the bottle bore the label of a chemist, who had been in business in Summerhill, but there was now no man of that name in the district.

Dr. James Flood, North Frederick street, said that the condition of the man's lungs would be sufficient to cause death, but, in view of the history of the case, he could not state the cause of death at the moment. Certain organs were undergoing further examination.

Inspector O'Callaghan, having stated that there was no further evidence, the Coroner adjourned the inquest, pending a report on the contents of the bottle from the State analyst.

The Irish Times.

SATURDAY, JULY 14, 1934.

NEWS SUMMARY.

IRELAND.

The Executive Council made two orders yesterday dealing with the standard price for wheat grown in the Free State.—(Page 9.)

The Government has made an order suspending as from July 31 next the operation of the scheme for the payment of 10s. per skin on calf skins exported from the Free State.—(Page 9.)

GREAT BRITAIN.

The eliminating rounds in the Air Race for the King's Cup were decided yesterday, and the semi-final and final will be decided to-day.—(Page 9.)

Sir John Simon, in the House of Commons yesterday, announced that the object of M. Barthou's recent visit was to secure approval of a mutual assistance agreement between the Baltic States, Russia, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Germany. The proposed agreement had Great Britain's sympathy, but she would undertake no new commitment.—(Page 9.)

ABROAD.

Herr Hitler last night explained the developments leading up to the coup of June 30th. He mentioned that seventy-seven had been killed.—(Page 9.)

Berlin has rejected, and Rome has accepted — this a surprise — Britain's Eastern Locarno proposals.—(Page 9.)

SPORTING

At Lingfield yesterday, Montrose won the Lingfield Park Plate.—(Page 12.)

At Hamilton Park yesterday, Red Horizon won the Motherwell Plate.—(Page 12.)

FINANCIAL.

London Stock Markets were not quite so busy, although some Industrials were higher. Courtaulds rallied strongly.—(Page 14.)

The Treasury Bill rate was 16s. per cent., as compared with 16s. 4d., and Discounts were firm. The Bank of England bought £53,400 in bar gold.—(Page 14.)

Dublin Market was firm, with Guinness units active.—(Page 14.)

The Jaundiced Eye.

A Special Correspondent of the Morning Post has been on a visit to the Free State, and during the last week he has been describing his impressions in a series of "sensational" articles in his newspaper. He certainly seems to have had some most unhappy experiences; for the picture which he paints of our distressful country is almost incredibly gloomy. The Irish Free State, according to our visitor, "is cheerfully, gladly, and admittedly heading for bankruptcy, ruin, and Communism." Economic conditions are appalling. The farmers are gasping for breath, while "in the fields and in the streets revolvers are discharged as regularly as the clock goes round. The citizen, inured by long familiarity, neither pauses nor turns about." "The tourists and holiday makers, who thronged the by-ways of the land, to-day avoid its confines. Motor cars are a comparative rarity. Dublin itself bears less outward evidence of luxury than the average English market town." We find it difficult to take this kind of thing seriously. There is no doubt that the Free State at the moment is in a condition of some economic distress, for which it has nobody but its own Government to blame; but the suggestion that it is plunging headlong towards Communism is sheer nonsense. Furthermore, we are very glad to say that we have noticed no sign of revolver shooting recently. Possibly young men have arms; but the Free State is as safe for the tourist or the citizen as any other country in the world. As for the absence of luxury, we wonder if the visiting correspondent ever saw the cinema queues in Dublin? In point of fact, there is far too much luxury in Dublin, which, we venture to say, spends more money on amusement than any dozen English market towns put together.

Our candid critic, however, goes much farther. He devotes an entire article to what he describes as the "Protestants' Bitter Lot," and, in the course of his jeremiad, he makes some really astonishing statements. "Religious feeling in Ireland," he declares solemnly, "is as strong as at any time in her troubled history. The Protestant throughout the country is the subject of suspicion and antagonism." "In parts of Ireland they (the Protestants) live on sufferance; in isolated cases they are the subjects of the Irish boycott, the power of which, beyond the borders of the Free State, it is hard to conceive. They are ignored in the local shops, ignored by their acquaintances in the streets." That is not all. "In Dublin itself attempts were made to stop the burial of a Protestant layman. When the ceremony had been carried through, amid the jeers of a large crowd, a further ceremony was conducted over the grave." There is more in the same strain; but we shall not weary our readers by further quotation. Let us be frank. The Protestants in the Free State constitute a tiny minority in a predominantly Roman Catholic country. We do not deny that on occasions there may have been isolated instances of ignorant intolerance, just as there are isolated instances of the same kind of thing in every other country. We do deny, however, with the greatest possible emphasis, that the Protestants in the Free State have the slightest cause for complaint. On the contrary, they are living in peace and friendship among their Roman Catholic neighbours. They hold positions of high honour in the land. The recent case of the Sligo Town Clerkship shows that their Roman Catholic friends even are prepared to suffer on their behalf; and they resent very deeply any suggestion—whencesoever it may emanate—that they ought to be regarded as objects of pity.

We are strong, and convinced, supporters of the British connection in this country. We believe that Ireland's future lies within the frame-work of the British Commonwealth; and, for that reason, we think that everything possible ought to be done on both sides of the Irish Sea to assuage old bitternesses and to consign to oblivion the memories of past wrongs. Articles of the type to which we have referred cannot do any conceivable good, and are calculated to do almost infinite harm to the cause of reconciliation between the British and the Irish peoples. We have our faults in this island, but it is grossly unfair to depict us as a race of semi-savages who live by the rule of the gun. Irishmen of every class have taken a noble part in the building of the British Empire—and they have not all been Protestants by a long chalk. Fifty thousand of them died in His Majesty's uniform in the Great War. The Irish regiments were the pride of the British Army, and it must not be forgotten that there was not a conscript among them. We are grieved that, at a moment when men of good-will in both islands are striving to bring our peoples together, publication should be given to irresponsible statements which cannot but exacerbate enmity. We have not been sparing in our criticism of the Free State Government or of the failings of our own people; but they are our own people, after all, and we protest strongly against their vilification. When we read that "a sacred and binding promise to exterminate Protestantism, so far as in them lies, is part of a pledge of blood, and of killing no murder, which has been administered to some of the most stalwart of the youth of Ireland," we are heartily ashamed. Those of us in this country who are loyal to the King and the Empire do not desire that kind of advocacy.

An Eastern Locarno.

M. Barthou's visit to London seems to have been highly successful. Its object has been kept a profound secret, but anybody who had followed the course of M. Barthou's wanderings over the face of Europe could have made a fair guess at it, and Sir John Simon's announcement in the House of Commons yesterday corroborated the guess. The French idea of "an Eastern Locarno" is, apparently, near to accomplishment. This plan involves the creation of a pact of mutual assistance embracing Russia, the Balkan States, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Germany, on the lines of the Locarno Treaty of 1925. Russia is to be connected also with the existing Locarno Treaty, whose signatories were Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany and Belgium. In all probability she will give a guarantee to France and another guarantee to Germany, declaring that she will act in accordance with the Locarno Treaty in the event of war by one upon the other. France, in return, will guarantee the boundaries of Russia and the eastern boundaries of Germany. The scheme's whole fabric will be built upon mutual guarantees, and on that understanding Great Britain vouchsafes it her approval. No British Government, said the Foreign Minister yesterday, could approve an attempt to build up fresh blocs in Europe, one against another; but the scheme under question, being entirely a matter of mutual agreements, is entitled to Britain's encouragement. Furthermore, M. Barthou has been given to understand that Britain has no intention of entering into any new obligations on the continent of Europe; she is ready to lend the "Eastern Locarno" all the encouragement and sympathy that are hers to give, but she will take no part in it. Even if the French might have wished something more positive, they have gained a great deal; for they can carry on with their scheme in confidence that it will meet no opposition from Britain. It is a subtle scheme, involving nothing less than France's unquestioned hegemony of continental Europe. Germany will be ringed by nations which will remain her friends so long as she is willing to behave, but will be summoned into immediate action against her if she makes a move to reassert herself. Russia will be safe, and France's allies in Central and Eastern Europe will be more efficient than ever in their capacity as buffer States. There are, however, two essential conditions of any such pact. First, Russia must join—and Germany must rejoin—the League of Nations. In the second place, not only Germany's, but also Italy's, sympathy with the new pacts must be assured. Italy, for reasons best known to herself, has adopted the British attitude, but there is no ground to suppose that Russia and Germany will be any more ready to accord with Geneva than they have been in the past.

Seaside Resorts.

"Restraint and spaciousness"—these, according to the Daily Telegraph, are the designed characteristics of a certain English holiday centre; and restraint and spaciousness, we submit, are precisely the attributes that ought to be kept in mind when the Free State seeks to develop her holiday resorts. Ireland's scenery is unsurpassable in this corner of the globe, as an increasing number of visitors testifies every year; but much remains to be done before our holiday centres really can lure custom from those of other countries. The first step has been taken. It is now possible to find comfortable hotels at nearly every resort in the country—hotels that offer good food and pleasant accommodation at reasonable charges. The next step is to arrange for the entertainment of our visitors. Very few of the Free State's resorts can provide the ordinary amenities which every English resort possesses as a matter of course, and they must be obtained before Ireland can offer genuinely formidable competition. It is not a matter of "big wheels" or palatial dance-halls. What our Irish resorts need are increased attention to bathing facilities, pleasantly laid-out parks, promenades, attractive restaurants and the like. The day when holiday-makers were content to wear out their old clothes at the sea, and to lie on the rocks all day looking at the fishermen, is over; they want subtler amusements nowadays—places where they can bathe without hobbling over stones, where they can meet their friends, where they can have a drink or a meal in the sunshine, where, if so minded, they can dance. If the councils of our resorts were really enterprising—as a few of them are—they would devote themselves for a year or two to the improvement of their areas; and, if they keep the motto, "restraint and spaciousness," before their eyes, the improvement could be very considerable.

Films for Children.

Ever since the cinema came into existence as a popular entertainment, complaints have been made of the malign influence of films upon the youthful mind. Even this morning, as an old controversy is re-opened in the interview which we print with the Chairman of the Censorship Appeal Board, news comes from Bukharest of the trial of three schoolboys for murder, to which deed they are said to have been incited by the example of the screen. According to one opinion, we have in the Irish cinema an almost equally potent instrument for evil. Senator O'Farrell, happily, finds himself unable to support this gloomy view. He points out that we possess in this country what is probably the most rigorous censorship in the world. It is true that the English system, by which certain films are described as "for adults only," is not in use here, but it is by no means clear that we suffer from its absence. The official announcement that a film is strong meat for babes is quite sufficient to make it seem palatable to certain types of the grown-up, who might have ignored it had it not earned this dubious advertisement. In general, we feel that those critics who ascribe juvenile crime largely to such a source of influence are inclined to attach too much importance to the cinema and too little to the original sin of the child. Deadwood Dick and Buffalo Bill were heroes to children long before the first film flickered, and even in those simple days it was not safe to leave a loaded pistol within reach of a growing boy. We agree, however, that children patronise the cinema more often than is good for them. The cinema in these days, with its low prices and a reduced rate for children, is a boon to the mother who is anxious to find for her offspring some diversion which shall keep them out of the house. Some other inexpensive solution to this domestic problem must be found before the cinema becomes in practice what it is in design—an entertainment for grown-ups.

ST. BRIGID'S CATHEDRAL, KILDARE.

The preacher at 11.30 to-morrow in St. Brigid's Cathedral, Kildare, will be the Archbishop of Dublin. The collection will be for the Diocesan Board of Religious Education.

COURT AND PERSONAL.

The King and Queen have visited the Royal Scottish Academy, where they were received by the President, Mr. George Pirie. Having inspected the pictures, they went on to the National Gallery, where the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, the Hon. Sir Hew Dalrymple, conducted Their Majesties round the collection.

The King received Brigadier Sir Hugh Reid, C.B.E., at Holyrood House Palace, and conferred on him the King's prize for archery. Mrs. Burnley Campbell also was received by His Majesty, and was invested with the Insignia of a member of the British Empire (Civil Division).

The Queen was received by the Duchess of Richmond and Gordon (President) and the Countess of Mar and Kellie (Vice-President) when Her Majesty inspected the nurses of the Queen's Institute of District Nursing in the garden of Holyrood House on Thursday.

The Prince of Wales will leave London by air next Tuesday for Bath, and will meet the tenants of the Duchy of Cornwall for their annual assembly. His Royal Highness, as President of the Royal Humane Society, received Mr. H. E. B. Jones at St. James's Palace on Thursday, and presented him with the Stanhope Gold Medal.

Prince George spent yesterday visiting social service clubs in the Midlands. On the previous day he had driven two hundred miles in his tour through the unemployment centres in North Staffordshire.

Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone will leave London in about a fortnight on a round of country visits, and will not return to Brantridge Park, Sussex, till the middle of August.

The Sultan of Morocco has quite recovered from his recent indisposition, and is seen daily walking in the Bois de Boulogne. He was entertained on Wednesday by Marshal and Madame Lyautey at afternoon tea, when several distinguished guests were invited to meet him.

At the dinner party given on Thursday night by the Italian Ambassador and Donna Antonietta Grandi at the Italian Embassy in London, the guests included King George of Greece, the Duchess of Northumberland, the Marquess and Marchioness of Carisbrooke, the Countess of Willingdon, the Countess of Ilchester, the Earl and Countess of Winchilsea, Lord and Lady Alastair Innes-Ker, Lord and Lady Moyne, and many members of the Italian Diplomatic Corps.

The popularity of private art exhibitions is steadily increasing. One of the latest is that being organised by Viscountess FitzAlan of Derwent, which will include painted mirrors, screens, tables and trays. It will open next Tuesday in the Walker Galleries, 118 New Bond street, London, and will be continued till Tuesday, July 31st.

The Duchess of Richmond and Gordon will return to Goodwood early next week from The Inch, Edinburgh, where she is the guest of Sir Robert and Lady Susan Gilmour. Priscilla Countess Annesley will leave London for Cowes the end of this month. The Dowager Lady Inchiquin and the Hon. Griselda and the Hon. Helga O'Brien have returned to Dromoland Castle from London.

The engagement is announced, and the marriage will take place quietly at the end of this month, between Martin J. Molloy, Barrister-at-Law, 48 Lansdowne road, Dublin, second son of the late William Molloy, Rose Inn street, Kilkenny, and Ann (Nancy) Liston, youngest daughter of the late Patrick T. Liston, solicitor, and of Mrs. Liston, Rathkeale House, Rathkeale, County Limerick.

The marriage between Nicholas Percival, third son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Flood Davin, of Mallow, County Cork, and Phyllis Finola, only daughter of Mrs. Stevens and the late Robert W. Stevens, of Cranmore, Highfield road, Rathgar, Dublin, will take place early in September.

The wedding between the Rev. Harold Osmond Duncan, St. Hilda's Church, Hartlepool, son of Henry Colclough Duncan and Mrs. Duncan, "Melrose," Sandycove, and Eileen Mary, daughter of Thomas Edwin Lynn and Mrs. Lynn, Andover, Hants, will take place in St. Mary's Church, Andover, on 15th September, at 2.15 p.m.

The marriage arranged between Arthur Hugh Montgomery, elder son of Hugh Montgomery Irwin, of Derrygore, Enniskillen, and grandson of the late Right. Hon. Mr. Justice Samuels, and Phyllis Cerise, elder daughter of Cecil Hastings and Mrs. Darley, of Gortanore, Foxrock, County Dublin, will take place very quietly, owing to mourning, on 31st August at Tullow Church, Carrickmines.

LONDON LETTER.

THE BARTHOU PACTS.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

Sir John Simon's long and interesting speech on the position of continental politics in the House of Commons to-day makes it clear that his reply to M. Barthou on Tuesday last was that Britain will enter upon no further commitments, but will remain a disinterested and benevolent spectator of efforts to promote a new European pact of goodwill and mutual guarantee. His intimation that Italy will take a similar line gave satisfaction to the House, particularly as it was understood that Italy also stated that she would embark upon no new commitment or go beyond the Locarno Treaty. It is generally considered that France and Germany have a reasonable prospect of agreement, and that the differences which have divided them of late may be adjusted. Everything depends, however, upon the action of the States interested, as Great Britain and Italy can do nothing but offer good wishes and friendly counsel.

Subsidies for Beef.

The Government intends to make arrangements to carry out the proposals of the Minister of Agriculture for a temporary beef subsidy as speedily as possible, and the financial resolutions will be taken on Monday, with the second reading of the bill on Thursday. The financial resolutions provide a much fuller definition than was contained in the White Paper of the classes of cattle in respect of which the subsidy will be paid. Payments will be made out of the Cattle Fund, the resolution states, to producers of cattle in respect of sales of steers, heifers or cow-heifers, or carcases thereof, effected in the United Kingdom before the end of March, 1935. It also will provide for the appointment of a Cattle Committee by appropriate Ministers, and will authorise them, with the approval of the Treasury, to pay out of the Cattle Fund the remuneration of the members, staff and agents of that committee, and any other expenses incurred by it or by Ministers in connection with the matter.

Privy Council Appeals.

The decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council yesterday to hear the arguments on the validity of the Act passed by the Free State Parliament abolishing the right of appeal to the Privy Council was much discussed to-day. Varied opinions were expressed on the probable outcome when the hearing comes on in October. It is recalled that during the last case of this kind the Irish Free State Government entered no appearance, and this may happen again. Discussing the point with a legal man to-day, I was told that should the case come to a hearing and a decision be given, it may have very far-reaching effects, since in all probability it would apply to all the other Dominions. The fact that the Irish Free State has a written Constitution, however, may influence the proceedings, but on this point my informant was unable to express any definite opinion.

Betting and Lotteries.

Difficulties attendant on the passing of the Betting and Lotteries Bill are becoming pronounced, and it has been suggested by Sir John Gilmour, the Home Secretary, that the Government may find it necessary to remove the bill from the Standing Committee and take it back to a Committee of the whole House. Unless the Government takes this action the bill certainly will be lost. The Standing Committee has sat for two days, and those two days have been occupied in disposing of only one amendment. Sittings can take place on a possible six days more, and over one hundred amendments still stand on the paper. On Tuesday next there will be a struggle over the proposition of the Government to legalise the totalisator on greyhound racing tracks, and it is highly improbable that any business will be done. One of the most important amendments to the measure is that which deals with State lotteries, and this is a highly contentious matter.

The Nation and the Codex.

It is announced that the nation has contributed £51,000 towards the purchase of the Codex Sinaiticus, a not unsatisfactory sum in view of the ignorance of so many people on the exact nature of the document. The Government contributes £41,400 towards the cost, and this amount is included in a supplementary estimate for £4,351,820 issued to-day. It appears that when the manuscript was purchased for £100,000 the trustees of the British Museum provided £7,000, and that £93,000 was advanced from the Civil Contingencies Fund. Public subscriptions had totalled £51,560, and it was necessary to ask Parliament to grant the balance of £41,440. About £7,546 will be required to repay miscellaneous advances from the Civil Contingencies Fund, as compared with £18,810 in 1933. The items include the stamp duties payable in connection with the conferring of a Viscounty on Lord Buckmaster, and a Barony on Field-Marshal Sir George Milne, for which the amounts are £200 and £150, respectively. Expenses for a Service held at Westminster Abbey in memory of the late Viscount Grey totalled £97, and a similar Service for the late King of the Belgians cost £108.

Traffic Offences.

As a general rule, the London traffic lights are obeyed willingly by drivers of all vehicles, but every day hundreds of summonses are issued for offences against the regulations. At Croydon this week on one day alone no fewer than 120 motorists and cyclists were summoned. In the Borough Court the penalties in most cases were twenty shillings for motorists and ten shillings for other defendants, while in the court of the County bench, which dealt with cases outside the Croydon Borough area, the regular fine for both was forty shillings. The magistrates have intimated that, unless there is a reduction in the number of summonses, the fines will be increased. Similar fines have been inflicted at various other courts, and it is difficult to believe that so many people deliberately disobey traffic signals. It is open to question whether the lights might not be placed in positions where they would be more readily distinguishable by drivers.

Golfers for Australia.

Arrangements are being made for the Royal and Ancient Golf Club to send a team representing Great Britain to Australia for a tour which will last some five months, and to take part in competitions connected with the Melbourne centenary celebrations. The British team will consist of four players, and it is said that the following have been invited to take part:—Jack MacLean, T. A. Bourn, L. G. Garnett and D. H. R. Martin, all of whom, except the first, are members of the Addington Golf Club, Surrey. The invitation has already been accepted by Bourn and Garnett, but it is thought that MacLean may be unable to make the trip, since he has already booked a passage to the United States, where he intends to play in the amateur championship in September.

MUSIC IN THE OPEN.

Dublin band engagements for next week include the following:—

Tuesday—Irish transport Brass and Reed Band. Millbourne avenue open space, 7.30 p.m.

Wednesday—Workers' Union of Ireland Band. Bull Wall, Dollymount, 7.30 p.m.

Friday—City of Dublin Connolly Pipe Band with Gaelic orchestra, choir and dancing. St. Patrick's Park, 7.30 p.m.

SEVENTY-SEVEN DEAD.

HITLER'S SPEECH ON GERMAN REVOLT PLANS.

COUP WHICH FRUSTRATED THEM.

"NIGHT OF THE LONG KNIFE."

TO a packed sitting of the German Reichstag, meeting in the Kroll Opera House, Berlin, and through all German broadcast stations to the whole German nation, Chancellor Adolf Hitler last evening delivered his eagerly-awaited speech on the coup of June 30th and July 1st.

Herr von Papen, the Vice-Chancellor, was a conspicuous absentee.

In his reference to the revolt, Herr Hitler mentioned that the dead numbered 77. Among these were 19 high Storm Troop leaders, 31 ordinary Storm Troopers and members, 3 black uniformed leaders. All these were shot.

Thirteen Storm Troop leaders and civilians were shot in resisting arrest, and three committed suicide. In addition, Herr Hitler said, five members of the party who were not Storm Troopers were shot, and three further S.S. men, who were guilty of disgraceful mishandling of prisoners.

The men who committed a number of acts of violence which, contrary to orders, occurred after July 1st, and had nothing to do with the cleansing action, will be handed over to the ordinary courts for punishment.

After Herr Hitler's speech, General Goering briefly thanked Herr Hitler for again rescuing the German nation. He said, turning to Herr Hitler: "You have succeeded. You possess the confidence of the nation. He who wants to destroy that, commits more than high treason."

The Reichstag unanimously approved, by acclamation, the Government's action dealing with rebels, and thanked Herr Hitler.

STORM TROOP LEADERS' EXCESSES

Chancellor Hitler described the events of which the deputies had been called to hear an account as "something which would live in German history as a tragic and warning memory.

"From a total of factual causes and personal guilt, and from human insufficiency and human defect has been born a crisis for the young Reich which might only too easily have had truly destructive consequences for a long time to come.

"When the Third Reich entrusted me on January 30th with the Government, the Nazis took over a State in collapse. We have not as usurpers taken possession of power, but we have received it by right. We have not made a revolution, but removed a régime that originated in revolt.

Referring to reports about the German situation in the foreign Press, Herr Hitler said:—

"Perhaps, it may be interesting and enjoyable for the outer world, especially for those who wish us ill, to follow these experiments, but for the German people they were painfully humiliating. We Nazis have a right to refuse to be put in the same class as previous German Governments."

The Chancellor declared with emphasis: "The German Reich to-day is not a geographical term but a political unity. We have turned the development of our people into a line which two years ago was regarded as impossible. Just as at home we safeguarded the unity of the Reich and the people, so we have unceasingly represented the rights of our people externally."

Chancellor Hitler's vigorous defence of the work of the Nazi Government was punctuated by bursts of overwhelming applause. He explained in detail the work of cleansing the nation, which was followed, he said, by a purifying of the economic life that resulted in a decrease of unemployment by four and a half millions.

SELF-SUFFICIENCY.

"By doing so we increased the power of consumption of raw materials accordingly. Such are our difficulties. But I assure the German people that we shall solve them.

"If our trade balance becomes passive as a result of political boycotts and the closing of foreign markets, we shall, thanks to the genius of our inventors and chemists, find the way to make ourselves independent of imports which we ourselves can produce."

"The following," he said, "played no part in the work of German reconstruction:—

"1—A small clique of international intriguers who, as apostles of Communism, deliberately tried to disintegrate the people, break up order, and produce chaos. But the overwhelming majority of German workers has seen through these Jewish international benefactors of humanity.

"2—A group of political leaders who saw their future finished by January 30th, 1933, but did not resign themselves to this fact.

"3—The revolutionaries who, in 1918, were shaken out of their earlier relations to the State, and thereby lost every inner relation to a regulated human order of society.

The Chancellor indicated that many of these revolutionaries, for revolution's sake, had fought on the Nazi side, and after the Nazis came to power they failed to realise that their lawless attitude had become out of date.

STORM TROOPS' NUMBERS SWOLLEN.

The speaker, continuing, said that first of all the originally isolated talk of a new revolution became gradually so intensive that only a careless Government could have overlookeed it. Consequently he had ordered his campaign against grumblers and critics. But he had also ordered an investigation into the constantly recurring rumour of a new revolution.

It was discovered, said Hitler, that, "contrary to my express orders and to statements made to me by the former Chief of Staff Roehm, the Storm Troops had been swollen in numbers to an extent which endangered the internal homogenity of this organisation.

"The Nazi philosophical training had moved more and more into the background in certain higher quarters of the Storm Troops. The natural relations between party and Storm Troops began slowly to be loosened. Tendencies were on foot to estrange the S.A. from its mission and make it subservient to other interests.

"The promotion of Storm Troop leaders showed a one-sided estimation of purely external abilities, or even presumed intellectual capacity. The greater number of the oldest and truest S.A. men were passed over in appointments, while the recruits of 1933 were shown favouritism.

"The public behaviour of these upstarts was un-Nazi and often repulsive, and it was just in these circles that a force of unrest in the movement was found.

"I have always emphasised that, though mistakes may occur individually, and they must be stamped out, that bad behaviour, drunken excesses, molesting of peaceful, respectable men are unworthy of a leader, non-Nazi and disgusting. Chief of Staff Roehm continually tried to protect those guilty of excesses.

"I pointed out to Roehm these improprieties without any perceptible result. Complaints increased. I began to receive communications about conversations of higher Storm Troop leaders referring to the necessity of a new revolution.

"Roehm tried to deny all these occurrences, and said they were disguised attacks on the S.A. It became clear that a certain group of high leaders was continuously working to estrange the S.A. from the party—that Roehm was busy with ambitious plans."

Hitler described how the immoral life led by Roehm and his associates began to spread and to influence an ever greater circle of people. "My orders that it be stopped were sabotaged. Gradually three groups developed among the leaders of the S.A.:—

"Those who blindly put themselves in the hands of Roehm. These were principally Ernst of Berlin, Heines of Silesia, Hain of Saxony and Heydebreck of Pomerania.

"A group which in their inmost hearts did not belong to this movement, but as simple soldiers felt bound to obey Roehm.

"A group which made no secret of its rejection and dislike of the Roehm group, and for that reason were very often removed from responsible posts. At the head of these stood Lutze and Himmler.

"Without telling me, and without guessing it, Roehm, using as intermediary a thoroughly corrupt swindler—a certain Herr von A—had formed a connection with General von Schleicher.

SCHLEICHER'S PART.

"Schleicher it was who gave outward expression to Roehm's inmost wishes. He drew up the concrete standpoint: That the present régime could not be continued; that the Army and Navy and all national organisations must be combined in one hand; that Chief of Staff Roehm was the right man for this post; that Papen must be removed, and that Herr von A was ready to take his place.

"I could never have given my approval to a change in the Reichwehr Ministry and the replacement of the Minister by Roehm. The fighting organisations of the party are political institutions, and have nothing to do with the Army.

"The preparations for the revolt were very extensive. Propaganda among the Storm Troops was made, alleging that the Reichswehr proposed to dissolve them and that Hitler had been won over to this plan. It was said that the Storm Troops must forestall this attack, and in the second revolution must remove the elements of reaction on the one side and of party opposition on the other.

"For this purpose Roehm, under the pretext of social relief measures for the Storm Troops, succeeded in collecting millions of marks. To strike decisive blows terrorist groups were formed under the title of 'staff watchers,' which received pay and were composed of hardened criminals.

"A wider circle of Storm Troop leaders was persuaded by careful propaganda that a second revolution was impending, whose object was to restore to me my freedom of action, and that this was to be called the 'night of the long knife.' The foreign political preparation of this action was entrusted to Herr von Detten.

"General von Schleicher also carried on the foreign political campaign, partly personally and partly through his courier, General von Bredow. Gregor Strasse was drawn in as his accomplice.

"In the beginning of June 1st I made a last attempt. I summoned Roehm to a five hours' conversation. I explained to Roehm that I should personally proceed against any attempt to create chaos in Germany, and that everyone who attacked the State must reckon me among his enemies.

TO REMOVE HITLER.

STANDARD-BEARER'S CONFESSION.

"Roehm departed, assuring me that the rumours were partially untrue, partially exaggerated, but that he would now see that these were put right. But the result of the talk was that Roehm, realising that he could not reckon on myself in his planned undertaking, now prepared the removal of myself.

"For this purpose a larger part of the S.A. leaders involved were told that I agreed to the planned undertaking, but must not know anything of it. It was declared that I had the desire to be taken into custody for 24 or 48 hours after the revolt, in order to be rid of the unpleasant burden that otherwise must result for me in foreign relationships.

"Meanwhile, the man had been bought who was to remove me later. 'Standard Leader Uhl confessed a few hours before his death of his willingness to carry out this order.

"When it was discovered that I would not co-operate direct action was decided on. Not only Roehm, but also Ernst, Heines, Hain and others, have declared before witnesses that a night of the most bloody kind, lasting many days, was to have taken place.

"British and French newspapers ever increasingly began to speak of an imminent revolution in Germany, and the plotters apparently began to work abroad. General von Bredow, who, as Schleicher's foreign political agent, made these connections, was working in accordance with the activities of reactionary circles who, without, perhaps, having direct connection with this conspiracy, allowed themselves to be misused as a ready underground instrument.

"Therefore I decided to put an end

FREE STATE WHEAT.

STANDARD PRICES FIXED.

LARGELY INCREASED ACREAGE.

TWO orders dealing with the standard price for wheat were made by the Executive Council yesterday, it was announced by the Government Information Bureau last night.

"One order deals with the year from August 1, 1936, to July 31, 1937. Under this order the standard price of 23s. 6d. per barrel has been fixed for the sale (wheat) season commencing August 31, 1936, and ending December 15 that year, and a standard price of 26s. per barrel for the wheat season commencing January 15, 1937, and ending April 15, 1937, and for the season commencing May 1, 1937, and ending July 31, 1937.

"The second order deals with the standard price of wheat for the years 1934-35 and 1935-36. Under previous orders the prices were fixed at 23s. 6d. per barrel for the autumn sale season and 25s. for the spring and summer sale seasons. Under the new order the price of 23s. 6d. for the autumn is continued, and the price for spring and summer deliveries in increased from 25s. to 26s.

THE ACREAGE.

"The acreage under wheat for 1932 was 21,388. In 1933 50,491 acres were under wheat, and it is estimated that the acreage this year will be between 80,000 and 90,000 acres.

The bulk of last year's crop was sold before Christmas. With the increasing acreage in the coming years a serious storage problem would arise if the crop were marketed in the autumn sale season, and the increased pri : is intended as an inducement to growers not to flood the market, but to hold part of their crop for the spring and summer sale seasons."

EXECUTIVE'S DUTY.

These orders are made under Section 67 of the Agricultural Produce (Cereals) Act, 1933, which requires the Executive Council to fix the price per barrel for home-grown millable wheat in respect of every sale (wheat) season. The order must be made two years before the commencement of the sale season to which it relates.

The making of the order fixing the price two years before the season does not prevent the Executive Council from making another order before the commencement or during the currency of a sale season increasing the standard price if they are so advised.

THE BOUNTY ON CALF SKINS.

TO CEASE AT THE END OF JULY.

It was announced by the Government Information Bureau last night that the Executive Council decided yesterday to suspend as from July 31st the operation of the scheme for the payment of a bounty of 10s. per skin on calf skins exported from Saorstat Eireann. Under this scheme, which came into operation on April 3rd, 120,000 skins have already been inspected.

As the slaughter of calves has now virtually ceased, it is felt that the administrative costs involved in the continuance of the scheme for the remainder of the year would not be justified.

SAN FRANCISCO'S HUNGER FEAR.

STRIKE VIOLENCE INCREASES.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Friday.

With the fear growing from hour to hour that a general strike cannot be averted, outbreaks of disorders continue in the residential districts, where the food lorries of retailers are being overturned.

There have also been numerous instances of creosote being thrown into the houses of shipping officials.

Undertakers are finding difficulty in delivering coffins ordered for funerals. The Lorry Drivers' Union has issued "passports" to permit the unmolested passage of lorries containing medical and hospital supplies.

Provision wholesalers, on the other hand, are being prevented by pickets of strikers from replenishing the city's larder.

There is an ever-increasing danger of the city being completely blockaded. Housewives are stocking their larders as if for a siege.

The fruit and vegetable supply will be exhausted on Saturday night. There is only sufficient meat in the city to last for five days.

The entire police force is being reorganised to cope with the situation. The National Guard is ready to protect the city if such a course is ordered by the Governor.

Two thousand five hundred cab drivers have joined the tramway employés, butchers and over four thousand lorry drivers who are already out in sympathy with the dockers.

NAVAL TALKS AT A STAND-STILL.

AWAITING THE ARRIVAL OF JAPANESE EXPERT.

The preliminary conversations between the Naval Powers are at a stand-still, Reuter understands, pending the arrival in London about the middle of August of Captain Iwashita, the Japanese expert, who left for Europe yesterday bearing the latest views and instructions of his Government.

Captain Iwashita will assist the Japanese Ambassador, M. Matsudaira, in the conduct of the conversations. Meanwhile, Mr. Matsudaira will probably fill in the intervening time by taking a holiday in the country.

No further meeting has yet been arranged between the British and United States delegations. The position so far is that each side has appraised the other of the attitude which it intends to take up next year in regard to the respective fleets, but it has been found that many of the broader issues of the Conference cannot be touched upon until the Japanese position is made clear.

It is now considered unlikely that a delegation will be sent from Italy until the Japanese have stated their case. This is not to say that Great Britain, France and the United States have not made useful progress in the preliminary talks, but since numerous statements by Japanese "official spokesmen" have given the impression that Japan is the only naval Power which contemplates a marked change of policy at the 1933 Conference, the other Powers are not in a position to advance very far until Japan's intentions are clarified.

RACE FOR KING'S CUP.

HIGH SPEEDS IN THE AIR.

THE ELIMINATING ROUNDS.

ONLY ONE WOMAN PILOT.

PRINCE GEORGE'S scratch entry for the King's Cup Air Race, beat all records for the event yesterday, with a speed of 191 miles an hour, but just failed to be placed.

Mrs. Patterson, the only woman in the race, won her heat. Previously bookmakers had offered 200 to 1 against her winning the cup.

The first airplane to take off in the race from Hatfield, Herts, crashed at Reading in making a forced landing. The machine was piloted by a young Indian, Turab Ali, of the Air Service Training Club, Hamble, Southampton. He had as observer Mr. F. C. Keating, of St. Albans, an engineer at the London Airplane Club at Hatfield.

A tree was struck, the machine had its undercarriage smashed, and damage was done to the lower wings. The tip of the propeller was also broken. Neither the pilot nor Mr. Keating was injured, except that Mr. Keating received a graze on his leg.

START DELAYED.

A heavy mist delayed the start of the race, a two days' event. Forty-one machines competed.

There were six heats in the first round, and of these the first four home in each round entered the second heat later in the day. The semi-finals and finals will be flown to-day.

Remarkably fast times were made by some of the machines. The first two home in Heat One, for instance, were the Hawker Tom Tit with the new Wolseley engines. These machines were entered by Lord Nuffield. The first to return was Mr. H. Sutcliffe and the second Mr. G. E. Lawdell. Their speed was 139 miles an hour and 132½ miles an hour, respectively.

In the second heat Flight-Lieutenant H. M. Schofield, a former Schneider Trophy pilot, came in first on a Monospar, with a speed of 136 miles an hour.

A FORCED LANDING.

One other machine made a forced landing at Northolt Aerodrome soon after starting. This was piloted by Sir Charles Rose, and was entered by him. It was a Miles Hawk.

The third heat was won by Flight-Lieutenant J. D. Wilson in a Desoutter Mark T at 116¾ miles an hour. In this heat the machine which Prince George entered, the Mew Gull, achieved the highest speed ever put up in a King's Cup air race. Captain F. W. Percival, the designer and pilot, reached 191 miles an hour and failed only by a length of the machine to be placed in the first four of the heat.

Heat Four was won by Mr. Peter de Havilland's Tiger Moth at 118 miles an hour, and Heat Five by Mr. L. Lipton's D.H. Moth at 124¾ miles an hour. In this heat Captain Geoffrey de Havilland, last year's winner of the Cup, came in sixth.

The last heat of the first round was won by the only woman pilot in the race, Mrs. Patterson, in her Miles Hawk machine.

The first round was flown as follows:—Hatfield, Upper Heyford, Whitchurch, Bristol, Old Sarum, Salisbury, Hatfield.

The second round, which is also of 232½ miles, covers the following course:—Hatfield, Waddington, Upper Heyford, Hatfield.

SENATE'S PROGRAMME FOR NEXT WEEK.

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

The Senate will, at its meeting next Wednesday, continue the debate on the second stage of the bill for the abolition of university representation in the Dail. The Order Paper will include also the report stage of the Finance Bill, the Committee stage of the Appropriation Bill, the second stage of the Gaeltacht (Housing) Bill, and the report stage of the Electoral (Revision of Constituencies) Bill. In connection with the latter measure it will be necessary, following the substitution of a new schedule of constituencies, to insert another new schedule arranging for returning officers and assistant returning officers. Sir John Keane's motion regarding land settlement will also be on the Order Paper.

THE POPE'S MESSAGE TO LIMERICK.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

LIMERICK, Friday.

The Most Rev. Dr. Keane, Bishop of Limerick, has forwarded to the Mayor (Mr. P. F. Quinlan) a letter received by the Papal Nuncio (Monsignor Paschal Robinson) from Cardinal Pacelli, Secretary of State at the Vatican, in which he conveys the Pope's pleasure at receiving from the Mayor a letter conveying the respectful greetings of himself and his fellow-citizens, and announcing the visit to the Vatican of the two trans-Atlantic flyers, Captain Pond and Lieutenant Sabelli.

THE EASTERN LOCARNO.

ROME'S SURPRISE ACCEPTANCE.

BERLIN NOT FAVOURABLE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Friday.

BY one of the most dramatic changes of front in recent history, Italy has swung round from vigorous opposition to the Eastern Locarno proposal to support of the British standpoint.

The change was the result of an explanation given by the British Ambassador last night to Signor Mussolini of the outcome of M. Barthou's conversations in London.

Right up to mid-day to-day the Press was condemning the proposal on the grounds that Germany could never agree to guarantee the Polish frontier, and that the Pact would, therefore, only aggravate the situation.

A semi-official communiqué stated that the Italian attitude was one of "favourable consideration" to the proposed Pact. The reasons given for the change were that the conversations in London had radically changed the nature of the Pact, "bringing it into line with traditional Italian policy," and that it no longer had any anti-German character.

It is not clear what happened in London to make the Pact acceptable to Italy.

BERLIN, Friday.

The Eastern Locarno proposal which Sir Eric Phipps, the British Ambassador, submitted to the German Foreign Office yesterday is described as "absolutely impossible" in the official Diplomatische und Politische Korrespondenz.

It is declared that Sir Eric also handed over with "words of recommendation" two other documents—namely, a proposal for a Franco-Russian "treaty" and a general act linking up the original 1925 Locarno, the Eastern Locarno and the Mediterranean Locarno with one another and with the League constitution.

The complete rejection of all three is indicated by the Korrespondenz, which characterises them as the "delivering up of Europe to the Franco-Russian community of interests."

FROM "THE TIMES."

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

A BRITISH INTEREST.

The Times observes in a leading article to-day:—In the true spirit of democratic government, Sir John Simon gave the House of Commons yesterday, and through the country a clear exposition of the plan for an Eastern European pact of mutual assistance, and the reception accorded to his speech certainly showed that parliamentary opinion supports the part which British diplomacy is playing. That part is, perhaps, even greater than the Foreign Secretary revealed yesterday. It seems to be clear—though Sir John Simon did not say so—that the proposal originally conceived by M. Litvinoff and the French Government was very much in the nature of a political alliance, with a military counterpart. But now the new Eastern pact is definitely not being negotiated on so one-sided a basis, and whatever the process by which this modification has been achieved, the British and French Governments deserve great credit for pressing and accepting the principle of reciprocity.

"This country," said Sir John Simon yesterday, "could not lend any encouragement or support to new arrangements between select States in Europe, any building up of one combination against another." A mutual assistance pact must be mutually helpful to all its signatories. That is the principle on which the British Government have insisted from the moment that the new proposal was brought to their notice, and on that basis it is now being negotiated. It is also possible after this statement to gauge more exactly the character of what is proposed for Europe. The Eastern pact is to establish mutual guarantees between Soviet Russia, the Baltic States, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany. France stands outside the pact, and would apparently not be a member of it; but she is its most active promoter, and would, in effect, form a connecting link between the system of security set up at Locarno and the new system of Eastern Europe. She is to be, as it were, an extra guarantor of the Eastern pact, and the U.S.S.R. is to be an extra guarantor of the Locarno Pact. Those who talk of defending Britain only on British soil are back in the days of woad and bows and arrows.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TO-DAY.

EVENTS THAT CHANGED WORLD HISTORY.

JULY 14, 1914.

Russia is in ferment, following the attempted assassination by a woman of a monk named Gregori Rasputin, who is said to have enormous influence with the Royal Household, and who is commonly called "The man behind the Czar." A message from Tobolsk states that the monk is dead. He is of peasant origin, but is stated to have kept a palace in regal state in St. Petersburg.

Further revelations as to the unpreparedness of France for war were made in the French Senate by the Minister for War, who said that during the previous ten years 100,000,000 francs had been spent on the Engineer Corps, as compared with 400,000,000 by Germany. At the present rate of construction France would, he said, have in a year and a half 250 heavy guns less than Germany. He added that the forts in the Haute Meuse were no longer of great importance, most of them being designed thirty-five years before.

A meeting of the Committee of Imperial Defence, held in London under the presidency of Mr. Asquith, was attended by Mr. Perley (a member of the Canadian Cabinet), Lord Kitchener, Sir John French, Mr. Churchill, Prince Louis of Battenberg, Colonel Seely Lord Morley and Lord Crewe.

The House of Lords passed Lord Dunraven's federal amendment to the Home Rule Amendment Bill.

Some surprise has been caused in Ireland by the recall to London of Sir Edward Carson.

The bodies of a man, later identified as Thomas Percy Horridge, and a woman believed to be his wife were found yesterday in a gas-filled room over their shop in Vernon road, Basford, Nottingham.

OBJECT OF M. BARTHOU'S VISIT.

EUROPEAN PACT OF MUTUAL ASSISTANCE.

SECURITY GUARANTEES TO GERMANY.

IN the House of Commons yesterday Sir John Simon made an important statement on the recent conversations with the French Foreign Minister (M. Barthou).

The main subject of which M. Barthou came to talk, he said, was the possible creation of a pact of mutual assistance between five elements, counting the Baltic States as one, others being Soviet Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany.

A further feature would, in a certain way, connect Russia with the Locarno Treaty.

The pact would take the form of a guarantee by Russia to France on the one hand, and to Germany on the other, in the event of conditions arising which would bring the original Locarno Treaty into operation. Reciprocally there would be an assurance by France in respect of the boundaries of Russia and the boundaries of Germany on the Eastern side.

It was a pact of regional guarantees.

M. Barthou had accepted, without qualification, the assurance that Great Britain could not give an assurance of moral support to a new arrangement between the States of Europe which would be of the character of one combination against one another.

Further, Great Britain had made it clear that, whatever encouragement she might give to the new scheme, she could undertake no new obligations at all. They were not extending their commitments in any way.

If Russia became a party to this arrangement, it was essential that she should come within the League of Nations.

With the security thus offered to Germany, they would have good grounds for resuming negotiations for a convention such as would provide for a reasonable application of the principle of German equality of rights in arranging for the security of other nations.

It appeared to the Government that the occasion should be used for the promotion of the objects for which the Disarmament Conference was called.

Signor Mussolini had expressed Italy's approval of the British attitude.

AIR DEFENCE PROBLEM.

Sir Herbert Samuel, in opening the debate, asked for an explicit statement from the Government in regard to their intentions to provide a larger Air Force. It was plain, he said, that the Government had abandoned any hope of fruitful results from the Disarmament Conference, and whilst neither the Liberal nor the Labour Party favoured one-sided disarmament, he considered that when they were asked to increase their armaments they should be given some proof of the necessity. Parity in the air had been defined to mean equality in the air with the strongest force within striking distance. There were only two Powers within striking distance—France and Germany. No one could anticipate any danger from France, and in the case of Germany our present Air Force was more than equal in strength to hers. Yet Mr. Churchill declared that we ought straight away to double, or treble, our Air Force. That was the language of a Malay running amok—the language of blind, causeless panic. If each nation strove to outdo its neighbour in the matter of arms, the only result would be international insecurity.

Major Attlee (Labour) inquired whether they were to regard officially the Disarmament Conference as dead. The Labour Party, he said, stood out for a system of collective security, under the League of Nations, and their complaint was that the principles of the League of Nations had not been fully carried out.

SIR JOHN SIMON'S STATEMENT.

MUTUAL ASSISTANCE PACT.

Sir John Simon, speaking of his conversations with the French Foreign Minister, said that the main topic was the possible creation of a pact of mutual assistance, which would embrace a number of countries in Eastern Europe, including the Baltic States, Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany. The suggested pact would follow the analogy of the Locarno Treaty. There was a further feature, which would connect Russia with the existing Locarno Treaty, in the form of a guarantee on the part of Russia to France, on the one hand, and to Germany, on the other, in the event of conditions arising which would bring the original Locarno Pact into operation.

Reciprocally, there would be an assurance by France in respect of the boundaries of Russia and the boundaries of Germany on the eastern side. That was the bare bones of what, no doubt, was an ambitious and elaborate scheme. This was plainly a pact of regional guarantee, but no Government in this country could give any countenance or moral support to any arrangement between the States of Europe, which would be of a definitely selective character in the sense of building up one combination as against another. M. Barthou accepted that position without any qualification at all.

Whilst, therefore, a selective alliance was ruled out, it should be made clear that what was proposed was a mutual pact. They were, it should be understood, undertaking no new obligations at all. If Russia was going to be a party to this new arrangement it was absolutely essential that she should come within the League of Nations. That was also the view taken by the French Government, and he believed it was the view taken by the Russian Government. If such a mutual guarantee became effective, it would afford the best grounds for the conclusion of a convention such as would provide for a reasonable application of the principles of German equality of rights in a régime of security for all nations. And an endeavour must be made to take advantage of the new combination, if it came about, to promote the objective for which the Disarmament Conference was called. The new régime would be, if it came about, in the truest and most complete sense, reciprocal.

Sir Stafford Cripps interposed to ask whether the contemplated covenants would be made through the League of Nations or through some fresh device.

Sir John Simon said that he had heard no suggestion of a fresh device, but it must not be supposed that the matter had travelled any further than it had. There was a vast deal of working out to be done. The conception in the post-War world was that mankind would be best sheltered and most secure if he lived in a building which, by means of a suitable combination of parts, would cancel out strains and dangers, because every part was making a suitable contribution to protect the whole. They could not but think that an expansion of the system of assurances, so long as they were mutual in expression, and reciprocal in intention, should make for the strengthening of the foundations of peace and the restoration of confidence in Europe.

In these circumstances, the British Government had decided to make public their view that an eastern pact of mutual guarantee, based on the strictest principles of reciprocity and conceived with the genuine purpose of strengthening the foundations of peace in Europe and the world by creating a further basis of reciprocal guarantees, was well deserving of the support of the British Government and people.

Dealing with Italy, he said that her position was different. It was improbable that Italy should become personally responsible for the eastern pact any more than we should be. He had that morning received a communication from Signor Mussolini to the effect that the attitude of Italy as a signatory to the Locarno Pact was similar to that of Great Britain. Italy would regard with sympathy proposals which were made on the basis of absolute reciprocity between all the countries concerned.

AIR POLICY.

Passing on to the question of air policy, Sir John Simon asked if Sir Herbert Samuel really suggested that, if he was a Minister responsible for the safety of this country, he would as a matter of course postpone all consideration of defence until the day when the Disarmament Conference had come to a conclusion, good or bad? The Government could do nothing of the kind. In the matter of air defence, things could not be done between night and morning; for preparations had to be worked out before they got results. It was, therefore, the business of any Government not to shut its eyes to possibilities of the conclusion of the Disarmament Conference until the discussions actually came to an end.

It was folly to pretend that they ought not to contemplate the possibility of further provision being made for air defence. That was a proposition most sensible people would accept. (Cheers.) As the first Lord of the Admiralty said in effect, if world disarmament could not be obtained, we could not continue to indulge in a delusion alone. (Cheers.)

MR. CHURCHILL'S APPROVAL.

Mr. Winston Churchill said that he believed that the admission of Russia to the League of Nations would be welcomed by all, even by those who had the greatest prejudices against the system of government which the Russian people had found it necessary to adopt. He expressed approval of the Government's action, and went on to say that he was glad the Disarmament Conference had passed out of life into history. It was the greatest mistake to mix up disarmament with the League of Nations, or to suggest that the failure of the Disarmament Conference was the end of the League of Nations. He hoped they had reached the end of the period when the Government would be pressing peaceful France to weaken her armed forces. The dominant factor of the situation was Germany, who was rearming, particularly in the air, and we ought not to be in a position where we were dependent upon assistance from France. It was our duty, he continued, to place the Empire in security at the heart and centre, and to rely upon our own strength. No country as large and wealthy as ours had any right to be in a position when it might be held up to ransom and made the object of blackmailing demands.

Sir Austen Chamberlain said that, judging from the speeches, the House had never been more united than in respect of the policy which the Foreign Secretary had announced. M. Barthou's visit to this country had, indeed, been fruitful. If the results of the convention could be brought to fruition, a real step forward would have been taken in the pacification of Europe, and in the restoration of confidence in the world. It would be foolish to pretend that the proposals outlined by the Foreign Secretary, even if they had a favourable reception, meant ultimate success, but great would be the responsibility of any country which made the achievement of so great an additional security for peace impossible of acceptance.

The response to this proposal in Germany would form the touchstone by which we should decide what was Germany's proposal in demanding equality of armaments, whether she would be content with security, or whether she would demand domination. He did not agree that our efforts to set a limitation to armaments should cease. He shared the hope of the Foreign Secretary and the French Minister that this new policy, if it could be given effect to, would form the ground on which we could build up a new system of armaments limited by agreement.

Mr. Eden (Lord Privy Seal) wound up the debate, and the House adjourned.

DEBATES IN MANY LANGUAGES.

INTERESTING PAPERS AT THE CELTIC CONGRESS.

NATIONALITY, ART, MAGIC, AND ARCHÆOLOGY.

EARLY IRISH REMAINS IN SCOTLAND.

THE proceedings of the Celtic Congress were continued yesterday in University College, Dublin. There was a large attendance of delegates and Dr. Douglas Hyde presided.

A debate in Irish, Scottish, Gaelic, Manx, Breton, Cornish and Welsh took place, of which the following are summaries:—

Mr. J. J. Kneen (Douglas), speaking in Manx, said that the Government of the Isle of Man was friendly, and had recently granted money for the publication of a Manx grammar, which he (the speaker) had prepared. Useful work, he said, had been done by the Manx Society, which was founded about forty years ago for the preservation of the Manx language and folklore. The Aeglagh Vannin (Young Manx), which was founded a few years ago, was spreading Manx ideals among the young people. The Cruignaght was founded ten years ago, and it was hoped thereby to preserve Manx music, folklore, arts, etc.

The Rev. Dr. Neill Ross (Scotland) spoke in Scottish Gaelic, saying that the Gaels of Scotland, Ireland and Man were closely related in race, language and culture. They ought to be united to-day in their common effort to preserve their racial heritage. Conditions which were economic and educational had contributed to the widening of the Gaelic in Scotland. The great agency for the revival of the old tongue was An Cumman Gaedhealtach, which had purely a cultural aim. The Cumman had 170 branches and carried on its work by instituting classes or gatherings for competitions in language and music.

POSITION OF IRISH.

Mr. P. Sugrue ("An Seabhac") said that the Gaelic League had done great work since its foundation forty years ago, but they could not honestly say that they were satisfied with the progress that was being made. There was no excuse for anyone in Ireland not having Irish now, because every means of learning it were available. The Gaelic League wanted more than the language; they wanted to resurrect feelings of pride for their native land.

Mr. P. T. McGinley, President of the Gaelic League, mentioned with regret that a lot of English had been spoken at this Congress. Irish was progressing throughout the country, but it was sad to think that in the three-quarters of the country which had a native Government the laws were being put into operation in a foreign tongue.

The Rev J. McKechnie, M.A. (Glasgow) said that the number of native speakers of Gaelic in Scotland had fallen during the period 1891 to 1931 from over 250,000 to 130,000. That meant that only 2½ per cent. of the population had Gaelic, whilst 97½ per cent. spoke either broad Scottish or English "of a kind." Out of the three hundred schools in the North and North-West of Scotland where Gaelic was said to be taught, it was taught as a foreign language, and was not used, so far as he could ascertain, as a medium of instruction. They had no geography, arithmetic or science books in Gaelic. Gaelic was in a desperate and dying state in Scotland, and any attempt that had been made to revive it had been purely local and territorial in character. To the millions of the industrial areas Gaelic was unknown; even the fact that it was the national language of Scotland was unknown. To remedy that state of things the Gaelic League of Scotland had been brought into existence.

Professor Cormac O'Kielly, Mr. Donn Piatt, the Rev. David Duncan (Edinburgh) and Mr. Hector MacDougall also spoke.

An apology for absence was received from President de Valera.

IN MANY TONGUES.

Professor Lloyd Jones presided at a debate in which the Welsh, Breton and Cornish delegates spoke in their own languages.

No English was spoken, and the debate was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthems of Wales and Brittany.

The Chairman said that after such a big Gaelic sitting the Welsh had an opportunity of expressing themselves freely.

Miss Mary Williams (Swansea) referred to the efforts of the Irish and the Scots to preserve the Gaelic language, and said that the delegates were delighted to find such an amount of the old language spoken in Ireland. She felt that there was such a tremendous gap between the Gaelic and the Welsh tongues as to make inter-communication very difficult. The Welsh language still was in a strong position, but therein lay the danger of satisfaction.

Professor Hughes (Swansea) remarked that, although Wales was so close to England, it had kept its language. Formerly the mountainous position of Wales was a protection to her tongue, but now "wireless" and the "pictures" had a tendency to interfere seriously with the position of the language.

Mr. L. Andouara, having uttered a few words in Irish, turned to Breton, and said that 1,200,000 people in Brittany spoke Breton every day. That number did not include those Bretons who knew the language and were residing abroad. He thanked God that Welsh was strong, that the native speakers of Irish numbered 250,000, and that there were 100,000 speakers of Scottish Gaelic. The Breton language, he said, was beginning to be taught in the Christian schools, and, despite Government opposition, there was a demand even from Government scholars themselves to have it so taught. The nationalist movement was growing quickly, and it was to be hoped that a native Breton Government would, before long, be in power, and that their country would be free from the oppressive rule of the French. (Applause.)

CHRISTIAN ART IN BRITTANY.

A paper on Breton Christian Art, by James Bouillie, president of the Atelier Breton d'Art Chretienne, who was absent through illness, was read by Mr. Riou, of Brittany, who spoke in French.

In the course of the paper it was stated that religious art attained its zenith in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, which were epochs of national freedom. The union with France, the centralising movement of Louis XIV.'s reign and of the revolutionary period gradually exhausted the inspirational sources of Breton art, which perished, save only in certain pieces of popular furniture and costume. In the nineteenth century all original art was dead in Brittany. Everything in the domain of religious art consisted of a poor imitation of older modes. It was the age of "substitutes" in all its horror. Stucco and plaster replaced stonework, cast iron replaced wrought iron, gilt and silvered copper did service for the genuine articles, horrible plaster creations from Paris replaced their timber and stone saints, and imitation marble delighted both clergy and laity. The twentieth century merely continued those fatuities, and some still built churches in Brittany which stood in about the same relation to mediæval art as man and monkey. In everything that constituted religious art the scandal still went on. If the Bretons had to complain of the large unprogressive element which was delaying the advance of their country to newer and more traditional modes, in harmony with the eternal principles of art, they must rejoice also at the growth of an art revival fostered by a large section of the clergy and supported by an enthusiastic following among the younger men keen for liturgical principles.

Mr. L. S. Gogan, who presided, said that the paper, in the main, was the challenge of a patriotic Breton artist to the imported art which Brittany alone, with other Celtic countries, had to put up with for a long time. The paper ended with an appeal to the Irish and Bretons, the only Catholic Celts, to form a close collaboration.

GAELIC IN SCOTLAND.

Mr. W. J. Watson, Professor of Celtic, Edinburgh University, stated that the differences between the members of the Gaelic branch of Celtic were so comparatively slight that they might be called dialectic. They could say with complete confidence that Celtic speech was current all over Scotland in the first century. The difference between the Gaelic and the language of Britain at an early period was much less than that between Gaelic and Welsh at a later period. They had also a very important group of names of places, or rather districts, which suggested settlements from Ireland which were not recorded in Irish literature. Another indication of early Gaelic influence was the Ogham inscriptions, which originated in Ireland. All such inscriptions as had been deciphered satisfactorily were in early Gaelic. The correct inference from their presence on the east coast appeared to be that there was an Irish settlement about 400 B.C. From names of places and persons the evidence was clear that Gaelic was spoken from Forth to Tweed. Some Gaelic names might be found well across the border.

The Rev. David Duncan (Edinburgh), moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer, said that he would like to refer to the kindness of Mr. de Valera in coming to the National Museum on Thursday with them. There was, he said, a very close affinity between the Irish and Scottish Gaels for centuries, and such congresses as this should bring more and more to the front the fact that they were so closely related.

The vote was passed.

NATIONALISM.

The relationship between nationalism and internationalism was dealt with in a paper by Dr. F. Llewellyn Jones (Wales).

Mr. Justice Meredith, who presided, introduced the lecturer, and said that he assumed that he would show that there was no inconsistency between nationalism and internationalism. With nations, as with individuals, self-expression was not found by closing themselves entirely within themselves. What Ireland had done at Geneva had been to her credit, and he had gained the respect of other nations. In that way a nation developed its "personality" and character.

Dr. Jones said that he believed that the greatest problem of world statesmanship was that of recognising the demands and ideals of nationalism with the claims of international peace and good-will. There was no true nationalism or patriotism which did not recognise the rival claims of the family of nations, of which each nation was but one member. Nationalism implied internalism, and internationalism was a conception based on nationhood.

Dealing with the frontiers of Europe, he said that, however great the care that was taken in drawing them up, there still would be large groups allocated to States alien in language, ideals and sympathies. It was calculated that on the Continent of Europe there were between thirty and forty millions in the minority racial and linguistic groups. The Celtic peoples to-day, although small in numbers, had set a girdle round the globe. There was not part of the world where Irishmen, Welshmen and Scotsmen had not played a great part in the industrial, economic, cultural and political life of the countries where they had established new homes.

THE BORDER.

After remarking that Irishmen had not yet realised all their aspirations nor attained all their ideals, and that numbers of Englishmen and Welshmen sympathised with the claim for a united Irish national State, the lecturer went on to say that he was convinced that the division of Ireland was unnatural, and that the time was not far distant when it would be realised by both parts of Ireland that the highest and best interests could only be served by the removal of the wall of partition, which interfered with Ireland's industrial and commercial development, and perpetuated bitterness and enmity between men of the same race.

In a paper on "Primitive Magic in the Lives of the Celtic Saints," the Rev. Dr. G. Hartwell Jones, President of the Congress for the ensuing year, said that the druids, no doubt, possessed a rudimentary science, and their intellectual superiority here, as elsewhere, in the dark Middle Ages inspired suspicion and terror. Missionary saints, like Patrick and Columba, found in the druids inveterate and resourceful antagonists. Wherever the druids tried conclusions with the saints they were worsted in the encounter.

IDEAS OF MAGI.

But if the druids sank in credit and decreased in power, the issue of the conflict was not represented as the triumph of spiritual over magical religion. Even Our Lord's Name was imported. In some Breton legends He appears in the character of Magician, and Columba startles us by the expression, "My druid (Christ), Who will not betray me, is the Son of God."

Weird and uncanny stories relating to the power that the saints possessed of flitting from place to place in defiance of the elements and laws of nature are tinged with magical ideas. They sail in phantom-ships, or ride on marine monsters, cloaks, sods of turf, or lilies.

The saints were detectors of crime; their penetration was abnormal, their thought-reading (for example, from the sound of man's voice) unfathomable. Another malignant power in the hands of unholy practitioners of the Black Art was that of sight-shifting, producing illusion and aberration. To protect their protégés, the saints made their aggressors turn their weapons on each other, or lose their way, or labour under the hallucination that their enemies were three times as numerous as they are.

To a favoured few among the saints, it was given to penetrate to the land behind the veil, and to communicate the faculty to others; or they could enable the soul to wander outside the body—an extremely hazardous experiment, in case the wanderer might not find its way back, or be turned into a man-wolf.

Delegates were entertained last night at a ceilidhe at University College, at which a number of distinguished visitors were present. Music was supplied by the Colmcille Band.

ACTION TO BEGIN.

"On June 29th I received news that at one o'clock the action was to begin with an attack on Government buildings. Ernst had remained in Berlin to carry out this plan. In Munich the S.A. had been called out for urgent duty.

"In these circumstances I could only make one decision. Only ruthless and bloody intervention could prevent the revolution from spreading. There was no question then that it was better that a hundred mutineers and conspirators should be destroyed than that ten thousand innocent S.A. men on the one side and ten thousand innocent men on the other should bleed to death.

"One revealing fact showed how successful the operations of my enemies had been. Mutineers in Berlin succeeded in securing from unsuspecting Berlin officers four armoured cars for their revolution, and Heines and Hain made police officers in Silesia and Saxony uncertain by telling them to distinguish between the S.A. and the forces of Hitler.

"At one o'clock at night I received the last alarming telegrams. At two o'clock I flew to Munich. Goering had also received orders from me, in case the purging actions took place, to adopt similar measures in Berlin and Prussia.

"With an iron fist he beat down the attack on the National Socialist State before it developed. In the presence of Dr. Goebbels and the new Chief of Staff, the action which is known to you was carried through.

"If anyone raise the charge against me that we did not use the ordinary courts for sentencing, I can only say that in this hour I was responsible for the fate of the German nation, and that I myself was the supreme court of the German people for this twenty-four hours.

"Everyone will know in future that, if he lifts his hand against the State, certain death is his fate, and every National Socialist will know that no rank and no position relieves him of his personal responsibility and thus of his punishment."

DUBLIN FIRE RESCUE.

Dublin firemen rescued a 77-year-old woman, Miss Christina Flood, from her bed when a fire broke out in her room at 171 Harold's Cross road, Dublin, in the early hours of this morning.

Michael Phelan, who lives next door, heard feeble cries for help shortly before 2 a.m. He ran into the street and saw smoke coming from the windows of No. 171. He attempted to enter the house, but failed, and called the Fire Brigade.

Firemen, who forced an entry by climbing to a first floor window with hook ladders, carried Miss Flood from her room. She had been slightly burned about the head.

The fire had apparently been caused by the overturning of a candle, which set light to the bed clothes.

KERRY MURDER CHARGE.

At a special Court in Tralee, Mrs. Elizabeth Conway, Round road, Castleisland, was remanded, charged with the murder of her husband, Martin Conway, on May 24 last.

Sergeant Troy said that when he charged the accused she said: "All right, so." After a few minutes she said: "Was it poison?" He said, "Yes." She then said: "If he took my advice it would not happen him at all. He would be away in hospital for himself. If he was poisoned, I know nothing about it. There was that old poison there this nine years."

Witness asked her what kind of poison was it, and she replied: "It was like yeast; himself got it years ago for poisoning rats. It was in a tin box."

TAYLOR ART SCHOLARSHIPS.

ADJUDICATION OF WORKS.

THE annual adjudication of works submitted in competition for scholarships and prizes offered under the Taylor bequest for the promotion of fine arts in Ireland was held at Ballsbridge yesterday. The judges were Lady Glenavy, Mr. Albert Power, R.H.A., and Mr. Leo Whelan, R.H.A.

A sum of £130 arising out of the bequest of the late Captain George Archibald Taylor and £10 voted by the Royal Dublin Society out of the California Fund (instituted by the late William Smith O'Brien in 1858) was offered in competition as follows:—

Scholarships—£50 offered in Class 1; £50 offered in Class 2.

Prizes—£20 offered in either Class 1 or Class 2; £10 offered in Class 3; £10 offered in Class 4.

CLASSES AND AWARDS.

Candidates were required to submit a work in the following classes:—

Class 1—Painting. A composition or subject picture in oil or water-colour, size not larger than 36 x 28, and not smaller than 24 x 16 inches. Subjects: (a) For Figure Painters: "Midday Meal"; (b) For Landscape Painters: "A Farmyard."

Class 2—Sculpture (all classes). A work in sculpture, not exceeding 36 inches in height. Subject: "The Prodigal Son." Each exhibitor in this class was also required to submit a study of a head, life size, in relief. Works could be executed in wood, stone or marble—modelled works in plaster of Paris.

Class 3—Water Colours. The work not to be larger than 24 x 30 inches, and not smaller than 18 x 24 inches. Subjects: (a) For Figure Painters: "A Village Shop"; (b) For Landscape Painters: "Twilight on the Farm."

Class 4—Optional Work. In this class the selection of the subject in Art was left entirely open to the student.

The following recommendations were made unanimously by the judges:—

Class 1—Scholarship (£50), to the painter of No. 15, Doris Violet Blair, a student at the Belfast College of Art. Prize £20, to the painter of No. 52, Lucie Charles, a student at the Metropolitan School of Art, Dublin.

Class 2—Scholarship (£50), to the modeller of No. 50, Gabriel Hayes, a student at the Metropolitan School of Art, Dublin. A prize of £5 was awarded to the modeller of No. 49, Robert Edward Tomlin, a student at the Metropolitan School of Art, Dublin.

Class 3—No award.

Class 4—A prize of £10 to the modeller of No. 38, Laurence Campbell, Metropolitan School of Art, Dublin. A prize of £5 to the painter of No. 54, Michael Bourke, a student at the Metropolitan School of Art, Dublin.

JUDGES' REMARKS.

In making their report the judges were of opinion that the standard of work is slightly higher than in recent years in Class 1, but still sadly lacking in serious attention to drawing and the use of paint. No. 15 (Doris Violet Blair) shows a pleasant sense of colour and a fine solid design, and they award the Scholarship to it.

The judges regretted that there should have been submitted only one landscape in Class 1, and no award was made.

The optional prize (Class 4) was awarded to a small modelled head (by Laurence Campbell), which the judges consider the best work entered in any class, and they also gave a prize to No. 54 (by Michael Bourke) in this class.

In the opinion of the judges the sculpture entries seemed to vary between a feeble effort at reality and a tendency to affectation, divorced from any serious feeling for construction or a study of the live model. No. 49 (by Robert Edward Tomlin) comes somewhere between these extremes, and is, in the opinion of the judges, the most promising work for a student, though, for a fine attempt at design, the Scholarship has been awarded to No. 50 (by Gabriel Hayes).

Only two works were entered for Class 3, and no award was made.

The subjects sent by the judges for next year's competition are as follows:—

Class 1—Painting. For figure painters, "Rehearsal"; for landscape painters, "Waterways."

Class 2—Sculpture: "St. Francis."

Class 3—Water-colours. For figure painters, "Debate"; for landscape painters, "Laneway."

THOROUGHLY INTERESTING.

In reporting generally upon the exhibition the judge stated that the entries by the younger competitors appealed to one as being more numerous and much more imbued with life than is the case with many of the more advanced students. In Class 1 twenty-nine entries were made, and although many of these were by one competitor it is a really live class. In this class, and also in Class 2, there is far too much cut-paper work; straightforward drawing, no matter what medium, is by far the best habit for youngsters to acquire. In Class 3 there is a varied and well-drawn set of work with some really good water-colour groups of flowers.

The judge further remarked that the designs and work generally in all classes up to Class 10 are, with few exceptions, most satisfactory. Of course, with young pupils, concentration of a serious nature can hardly be expected, but after sixteen or eighteen years have passed surely a student should be keen enough, and able to do serious work—this does not mean that there is nothing really serious in the higher sections, because some of them are excellent. Sections 12, 13 and 15, however, leave much to be desired. Some of the painting classes are very good, but quite a number of candidates seem to attach more importance to technique rather than to construction and general pictorial effect. In summing up the exhibition as a whole, the judge considered it to embrace a thoroughly interesting set of works, of which both teachers and pupils have every reason to be proud.

TRADE MARK DISPUTE.

CONDENSED MILK SALES.

LONDON AND IRISH FIRMS AT LAW.

From Our Correspondent.

LONDON, Friday.

A TRADE mark dispute between Cleeves, Ltd., of London, merchants of condensed skimmed milk, and the Condensed Milk Company of Ireland, Ltd., Lansdowne, Limerick, came before Mr. Justice Bennett in the Chancery Division, London, to-day.

Mr. Fergus Morton, K.C., on behalf of Cleeves, Ltd., moved for an injunction until the trial of the action restraining the defendants from selling, offering for sale, or advertising in Great Britain any condensed milk not of the plaintiffs' selection or merchandise, under any of the trade marks or brands, "Calf," "Cup," "Pet," "Goat," "Kerry," "Cleeves' Dairy," or "Shamrock," in alleged breach of an agreement of April 9, 1934, between plaintiffs, the defendants, and the other shareholders in Distributors, Ltd. The plaintiffs also sought to restrain alleged passing off.

ALLEGED UNDER-CUTTING.

Counsel said his case was that, under the agreement, the defendants had contracted to use their best endeavours to see that the seven trade marks remained vested in the plaintiffs. It was said by the defendants that the agreement had the opposite effect.

Mr. Morton proceeded to declare that the defendants were controlled by the Irish Free State Government, and, with the resources of the Government behind them, were carrying on a deliberate campaign of under-cutting to destroy the plaintiffs' business.

Sir Gerald Hurst, K.C., for the defendants, read evidence in reply, asserting that the price-cutting was initiated by the plaintiffs themselves. The plaintiffs had not come into Court with clean hands, and he submitted that there was no substance in the motion. The plaintiffs started the war, and the defendants were entitled to sell as they pleased.

The hearing was adjourned until Tuesday.

FATAL MOTOR ACCIDENT.

MRS. E. V. HANDCOCK KILLED.

Mrs. E. V. Handcock, wife of the Hon. Robert A. Handcock, of Garnafailagh, Athlone, was killed in a motor accident at Cleaghmore, Ballinasloe, at about eight o'clock last night.

She was motoring from Galway to her home with her husband, who is a brother of Lord Castlemaine, and their little grand-daughter. When the car, a saloon, reached a junction where a by-road joins the main road at Cleaghmore, the Hon. Robert Handcock, who was driving, saw another vehicle about to swing out of the turning. He applied the brakes, and his car swerved, struck a wall, rebounded, and then ran into an electric light standard.

Mrs. Handcock, who was seated in the back of the car, was thrown against the window, and sustained such severe head injuries that she died almost immediately. The Hon. Robert Handcock and his grand-daughter, together with a dog that was in the car, were uninjured.

Civic Guards removed the body to premises in Society street, Ballinasloe, where an inquest will be held by the local Coroner at 10 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Handcock was a daughter of the late Colonel Sir Edmond Bainbridge, K.C.B.

ROADSIDE FIGHT IN KILKENNY.

ASSAULT CHARGE ADJOUURNED.

From Our Correspondent.

NENAGH, Friday.

A roadside fight between members of rival political parties, in which Patrick Kenny, a labourer, of Grenanstown, Toomevara, was struck with a stick and afterwards died, was described by witnesses in the District Court here yesterday, when Michael Gilmartin, another labourer living in the same townland, was charged with assaulting Kenny.

In the evidence it was alleged that Kenny, who was a member of the League of Youth, and others became involved in a melee on their way home from the Toomevara Races on June 29. James Feehily, captain of the local branch of the Blue Shirts, was alleged to have produced a gun, which was taken from him by James Murphy and Patrick Young.

A rubber baton and a stick were used during the course of the fight, and Michael Ryan told the Court that he endeavoured to separate Gilmartin and Kenny. The latter was carrying something like the branch of a whitethorn, and pursued Kenny to the gate of a field, where he struck him on the head.

At this stage District Justice Flood said he would adjourn the case until next Thursday, commenting that the affair was more or less of a melee, blows being exchanged on both sides. He declined to give bail, but added that when the bulk of the evidence had been heard he would entertain the application of Mr. McGrath, solicitor for the accused man.

Mr. McGinn, Customs officer, stated that the value of the articles, which he seized at Captain Spring's residence, was 15s., and the duty on them would be 10s.

WOMEN IN THE POST OFFICE.

BADLY TREATED SAYS WITNESS.

LIVING UP TO 186 RULES.

THE Civil Service Commission again took evidence from a number of witnesses representing the Post Office Clerks' Association at a session held yesterday in the Boardroom of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Joseph Brennan, Chairman, presided.

Mr. de Courcy, Waterford, gave instances of what he thought unsuitable persons being promoted to postmasterships. He said that decentralisation, carried out with discrimination, would lead to a decrease in overhead expenses. It would lead to the discovery of the best qualified persons for specialised work and wider scope for the improvement of the service.

SURPRISE CHECKS.

The system of surprise checks during working hours with people waiting at the counters, when only small amounts of money were concerned, was objectionable. The policy of the department was to pay low salaries and remove financial responsibilities from the staffs. Everything in the Post Office was governed by rules. There were 186 rules governing the conduct of the staffs.

Miss Gartland, Dublin, said that a weekly half-holiday was not allowed the staff. Though there was no increase in the amount of work, the staff in the Central Telegraph Office, Dublin, was required to work at present about 100 hours overtime yearly, and the increased cost was apparently regarded as a saving.

UNFAIR TO WOMEN.

Mr. de Courcy said that women performed very much the same work as men. The women were not being fairly treated.

Mr. Gill, Ennis, said that they looked forward to the stabilisation of pay with fear and trembling. In reference to the weekly half-holiday grievance, he said that there was an aspect from the female point of view that might be considered in that connection. It might be said that the matrimonial prospects of the workers were affected; for many a young lady in other Government Departments had to thank the opportunities offered by the half-holiday for the prospect of a happy marriage.

Mrs. Kettle remarked that there were so many defects in the cost of living bonus system that she thought it would be better if it were abolished.

Replying to Mrs. Kettle, Miss Gartland said that of late years there had been a tendency to reduce the number of higher posts available to women.

Mrs. Kettle said that the denial of the half-holiday weekly was most unjust. She was informed that the Controller was responsible for the continuance of that grievance.

Mr. Delany said that the overtime was caused through the lending of members of the postal and telegraph staff to other departments. Representations on the subject had been resented.

The Commission adjourned until next Thursday.

CRASH AT NEW AIRPORT.

PROFESSOR AND WOMAN BADLY INJURED.

The air liner Aberdonian, in which the Prime Minister flew from Lossiemouth to Doncaster on his way to Worksop on Wednesday, crashed and caught fire while taking off from Aberdeen's new airport at Dyce yesterday.

The machine carried nine passengers in addition to the pilot, Flying Officer James S. Carr, and of these two, Professor Leybourne Stanley Davidson, Regius Professor of Medicine at Aberdeen University, and Miss Freda Cadle, were seriously injured, and the others received minor injuries.

Professor Davidson received severe face and body injuries, and Miss Cadle suffered from burns and shock.

They were removed in an ambulance to the Royal Infirmary, Aberdeen, and Professor Davidson was later transferred to a nursing home.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE.

GOOD GOING AT LAST.

Montrose Beats Two Others for £1,000 Prize.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

LINGFIELD, Friday.

It is a long time since I have been able to write that I have seen horses splashing through floodwater on a racecourse and making the sods fly. But this happened in the last race this afternoon; for, half-way through racing, we had thunder and lightning, and then a steady downpour of rain set in. There is a splendid growth of grass on this course, and several hours of rain yesterday had made the going very tolerable for horses.

Easy for Montrose.

It is at home, however, that better going is wanted, and we had again the spectacle of a valuable race dried up. The Lingfield Park Plate, worth £1,000, for three and four-year-olds, only brought out three runners; for Caymanas is being kept for the Sandown Anniversary Cup next Saturday. In his absence, long odds were laid on Montrose; for, although he may be faint-hearted, he had nothing to beat. Gordon Richards allowed Milano to lead him five furlongs, and then went on to beat Shrewton by four lengths. Thus, a good stake was almost presented to Lord Woolavington.

Bravura Fails.

Odds-on chances have been delusions this week, and another will o'-the-wisp was Mrs. Beatty's Bravura in the Batnors Selling Plate. She was well away, but was beaten three lengths by Duty Tax, who was allowed to run unbacked, and started at 100 to 8. Mr. Gaskell did not bid for his winner, whom Major Beatty bought for 330 guineas.

The favourite in the other selling race, Defanotis, was not so disobliging. He won by three lengths from Mr. Pitman, and then was sold to Mr. Tom Richardson for 410 guineas.

Carlore's Success.

The day's best field was that for the Jack's Bridge Maiden Plate—eleven. The Beary family were closely associated with this race; for Paddy trains the winner, Carlore, for Lord Portman, while John trains and Michael rode the favourite, Claudinia, who finished last of all.

Jocasta was actually the first to settle down, but Mandragora took it up after going a furlong. This filly was a little impeded when the second favourite, Buccaneering, hung towards her. At the distance Carlore took it up and won by a length and three lengths from Buccaneering and Mandragora. The winner, who is a promising son of Roidore, started at 100 to 9.

The rain had made the course slippery, and in the race for the Summer Handicap Knight of Lorn nearly came down when in the lead as he was making the turn into the straight. Soon after this Iownaputter, who had gone up second, went into the lead, and, resisting the favourite, Phileas, and Silver Box, he beat them by three-parts of a length and a length and a half. Ted Leader has done well with this moderate horse to win two races with him in the course of a couple of months.

Gatacre had shown some promise in his races last autumn, and I did not think this Hurry On colt would go so far into his second season before he won his first race. It was a modest event, the Oak Tree Maiden Plate, which he won this afternoon from four other indifferent runners. It seemed when Petrograd passed him a furlong from home that he would be beaten, but he came again and got up to beat Mr. Michalino's colt by a head.

Selections.

The £1,000 race to-morrow, the Great Foal Plate, will produce a better field than that for the valuable race this afternoon, and there should be half a dozen or more runners. The best of them may be a newcomer, Mr. R. C. Dawson's MINTERN. The Imberhorne Handicap may be won by CLUSTINE, and the July Stakes by SHERDLEY. The going here to-morrow should be the best that we have known for months.

GALTEE MORE.

CLUSTINE'S CHANCE.

On Wings Preferred for the Great Foal Plate.

The Great Foal Plate at Lingfield to-day is not likely to live up to its high-sounding title; for the recent winners, Theft and Alykhan, have been scratched, and Vallema is a non-runner. The field, therefore, will include nothing of outstanding merit, but, as the probables number seven, the event will not be such a big disappointment from a speculative viewpoint, as was the chief race yesterday. Street Singer and Mintern will be having their first experience in public, and I should not be in the least surprised to see both well in the fighting in the finish. The latter, indeed, has been shaping in very promising style in recent gallops at Whatcombe, and is said to be well fancied.

Bula filly, who was probably a very lucky winner of a valuable foal plate at Gatwick last month, will be called upon to give weight away all round. Her last race, however, has improved her, and it is thought that it will take a smart one to lower her colours. Also on the up grade is Four Bells, who has been subjected to plenty of strong work since running behind The Jesuit at Epsom. This Tetratema filly was a good deal more fancied on that occasion than her position in the market indicated, and she was unlucky in being hampered shortly after the start.

On Wings, I imagine, will start favourite; for, although she has failed to get nearer than third in four races this season, her efforts have been in better company. Her best race to date was at Sandown last month, when third to Flying Orders and Sea Bequest, and a reproduction of that form should be good enough here. Rose of England filly is not without a chance, but I shall be looking to her to win a useful-class race on softer ground, and my selection is

ON WINGS.

A well fancied competitor for the Imberhorne Handicap is Clustine, who showed a return to something like his best form when narrowly beaten by Silkstar and Fairyhill at Newmarket last week. He is well in on the pick of his form. Maureen was last seen out over a mile when unplaced to Foxcroft at Ascot, and, no doubt, she will do better over this shorter distance. I think that Miss Elegance, who receives 3lb. from Fred Darling's charge, is a more attractive proposition. She has been running well recently, and this downhill course should suit her to a nicety. However, seems to be the one to support.

In the Tandridge Court Welter Handicap I shall support and an obvious choice for the July Stakes is

HARDY,

SHERDLEY.

The King will pay his first visit to the Hamilton Park race meeting to-day, and the attendance should reach record dimensions. His Majesty's colours will be carried in four of the events, and I shall be very disappointed if at least two of his representatives do not score. Outstanding chances are held by Convent (Juvenile Plate) and The Abbot (Cambuslang Handicap), and I go "nap" on the latter.

(Train, Amiens street, 10.45 a.m.)

Surprisingly good support has been accorded by owners to the July fixture at the Maze, and very interesting racing is promised at this popular venue, which is the only race meeting in Northern Ireland nowadays.

Ca-Ca-Ce has been sent from the Curragh to run for the King's Plate, and, remembering his narrow defeat by His Reverence in a similar class of race at the Curragh, he must take a lot of beating. The possible danger is Gipsy Jane. Selections:—

Ulster Plate—Set Square.
Thorn Cup—Matona.
Montalto Plate—Smerwick.
Finaghy Plate—Lenadoon.
King's Plate—Ca-Ca-Ce.
Banbridge Plate—Lindop.

"IRISH FIELD" SELECTIONS

Selections by code will, if necessary, be made for the meetings at Leopardstown on Wednesday and Powerstown Park on Thursday next.

NEWMARKET NOTES.

Stanley House Horses in Good Work: Hints for To-day.

NEWMARKET, Friday.

The Stanley House trainer, C. Leader, was busy on the Limekilns this morning, and gave Rosetta a good five furlongs spin, in which she moved quite freely, but it is her trainer's intention to wait until conditions underfoot are favourable before sending her over a longer distance than she went to-day.

Fairhaven, Bobsleigh and Gynerium, who were beaten in their races at Ascot, all moved well in a good five furlongs spin with their elder stable companion, Pharillon. Bobsleigh is engaged in the Dullingham Stakes here on Tuesday.

Hyperion and Thrapston were given a good-pace gallop over one mile and a half with Highlander. Hyperion finished the gallop in good style with Canaletto (F. Rickaby), who assisted him the last mile. Haytime and Le Balafre were given a good six furlongs spin.

Major Beatty gave Brown Gown, who has done well since he ran at Pontefract in April, a good five furlongs spin, and he should be made a note of for future engagements.

Frank Butters gave Umidwar a brisk six furlongs spin with Alishah, and to-morrow he will be sent over a longer distance. Shami, Master Vere, Osman Pasha and Barred Umber were given a similar gallop, while Light Brocade covered the same distance by herself, and she is now looking fresh and well.

Hogg's Foxmasque, with Cresset, North Devon and Opera King, travelled seven furlongs at a nice pace. Foxmasque appears to do better each time he is galloped.

Earl subjected Scardroy and Bright Spark to a half-speed gallop over one mile. Scardroy has been unlucky this season, but he was far from disgraced when he finished third to Silver Jubilee at Sandown Park, and he will win a nice race when the going is suitable to him.

We shall have thirteen runners at Lingfield Park. In the Brambletye Selling Handicap Nick the Greek, Santa Lucia, Coomakista and represent us, and as the last-named is well handicapped he has my vote.

There is little to choose between Franchesa and for the Starboro' Selling Plate, but I give the latter the preference. Four Bells and ROSE OF ENGLAND FILLY (next best) will be well supported for the Great Foal Plate, and I shall rely upon the latter.

CLUSTINE*

will be seen out for the Imberhorne Handicap, and I make him my nap selection.

Since being under the charge of T. E. Leader has done well, and he should be difficult to beat for the Tandridge Court Handicap.

SHERDLEY

should win the July Stakes, but he will not find it an easy task to give Sewin 15lb.

At Hamilton Park my fancies are:—2.30, Whitehead; 3.0, Convent; 3.30, Slam; 4.0, The Abbot.

SPORTING GOSSIP.

W. Nevett's Treble.

W. Nevett, the jockey, registered a "treble" of winners at Hamilton Park yesterday with Bawbee (Wisha Selling Handicap), False Note gelding (Bothwell Selling Plate) and Culbertson (Cambusnethan Maiden Plate).

Raymond Leaves for Japan.

The well-known racehorse, Raymond, has been sold, and left J. Lawson's training establishment at Manton yesterday for shipment to Japan. Raymond, who belonged to Sir Abe Bailey, has not won a race this season, but last year he was successful in the Princess of Wales's Stakes and the Cambridgeshire at Newmarket.

Scoil Brighde this season's League champions, last evening at Croke Park beat Dominican Convent (holders) in the semi-final of the championship, and qualified to meet U.C.D. in the final. The two points margin about represents the winners' superiority. Miss M. O'Brien opened the scoring with a point for Dominican Convent, but a goal to Scoil Brighde quickly followed. Miss N. Daly scoring. Miss Connolly regained the lead for the holders, and near the end Miss Sheridan, who was outstanding, goaled for Scoil Brighde.

Only Seventeen Competitors.

Although the amount of prize money to be won at Hamilton Park Races yesterday was £790, only seventeen competitors were sent to contest the six events. Racing in Scotland does not as a rule attract very big fields, but there are generally sufficient runners to make the sport interesting. The prolonged drought, however, has had a telling effect upon the training gallops in Yorkshire, the chief source of supply of competitors for Scottish race meetings.

CRICKET.

GREAT BOWLING BY TATE

Lancashire's Remarkable Win at Blackpool.

THE cricket at Hove was of a thoroughly interesting nature, with Sussex making a big effort to defeat the weather and force a victory. Northants easily averted the follow-on, and when Sussex declared a second time at 115 for 5 the visitors were left with 221 runs required to win.

Brilliant bowling by Tate was responsible for the rout of Northants. He proved practically unplayable, and his final figures were 10.4 overs, seven maidens, seven runs, six wickets.

HOPWOOD AGAIN.

Lancashire made a remarkable recovery at Blackpool to win the match with Worcestershire by 32 runs after it had at one period appeared to be irretrievably lost. When play was resumed Lancashire led by 107, with one wicket to fall, and eventually they set Worcestershire the task of getting 122 to win on a badly worn wicket. It was not an impossible task, but Worcestershire never recovered from a bad start, and, following the dismissal of Walters and Gibbons for 26, Hopwood once more got a grip of his opponents, and in three hours ten minutes they were dismissed for 89, Lancashire thus securing their ninth and and most remarkable win of the season. Hopwood bowled superbly in both innings, capturing six wickets for 43 in Worcestershire's second effort and 15 for 112 in the match.

An extraordinary batting collapse by Derbyshire in face of Fleetwood-Smith, the left-hand googly bowler, at Chesterfield led to a splendid win for the Australians by nine wickets. Once Storer and Smith, who put on 74 for the third wicket, had been parted, Derbyshire collapsed in startling fashion. The last eight wickets went down in 90 minutes for 65, seven actually falling for a mere 40. Fleetwood-Smith, in one spell of seven overs, took five wickets for 18 runs, and his full analysis was five for just over five runs apiece.

BOLD POLICY PAYS.

A. B. Sellers appeared to have taken considerable risk when he declared Yorkshire's innings at Hull first thing yesterday morning with the overnight lead of 255 runs, as, notwithstanding a delay in starting play owing to rain, Essex had a possible four hours to get the runs. The bold policy, however, was justified, Yorkshire winning comfortably by 123 runs.

The bowling of Bowes and Douglas, who shared the honours of the Yorkshire attack, was the main cause of the collapse, Verity claiming only one victim.

Nottinghamshire lost their six outstanding wickets at Bristol in 45 minutes for 45 runs, and were beaten by an innings and 32 runs. The state of the pitch was largely responsible for their collapse, as, while only a little rain fell during the night, it was sufficient to render the pitch exactly to the liking of Sinfield and Parker. Walker alone displayed real confidence, and for two and three-quarter hours he batted so well that he scored 90, including seven fours. Voce tried to force the pace, and had the satisfaction of hitting three sixes in one over from Sinfield.

THE SCORES.

At Derby. Australians won by 9 wickets. Derby 145 and 139 (Storer 47. Fleetwood-Smith 5 for 39). Australians 255 (Bradman 71, Mitchell 7 for 105) and 32 for 1.

At Hull. Yorkshire won by 123 runs. Yorkshire 337 (Sutcliffe 166) and 127 for 5, declared. Essex 209 (Nichols 84. Verity 7 for 75) and 132 (Bowes 4 for 43. Douglas 5 for 48).

At Lord's. Players won by an innings and 305 runs. Players 651 for 7, declared (Arnold 125, Squires 119, Duckfield 106). Gentlemen 192 (Gover 5 for 57) and 154 (Mercer 4 for 32).

At Blackpool. Lancs won by 32 runs. Lancs 350 (Hopwood 53. Martin 5 for 25) and 229. Worcester 258 (Walters 58. Hopwood 9 for 69) and 89 (Hopwood 6 for 43).

At Leicester. Match drawn. Warwick 422 (R. E. Wyatt not out 161). Leicester 209 (Paine 5 for 68) and 191 for 6 (Berry 74).

GAELIC GAMES.

LIMERICK AND THE HURLING TITLE.

FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS' TEST TO-MORROW.

(BY PAT'O.)

LIMERICK'S striking hurling win at Thurles narrows the championship considerably, and it may be that the Garryowen men have had their stiffest game. Kilkenny are due home from America, and will have a full month's rest before their match with Dublin in the Leinster final. American tours have in the past been searching tests in hot weather, and Kilkenny had to play through a severe heat wave.

Whether they will have recovered fully by August or not, Dublin's new grouping will give the champions a good game at Maryborough. Kilkenny may escape the fate of past returning teams—Kerry, Tipperary and Mayo lost their home titles after past American tours—but if Dublin are beaten the Noremen go straight to the hurling final.

LIMERICK'S STIFF TASK.

Limerick have a more difficult road; for Waterford will be clever opponents at Cork, and we have yet to learn the strength of Galway's new attack. They meet the Munster winners at Roscrea. Limerick's long series of matches had taken away some of their great speed, and Cork were the principal attackers on Sunday last. They deserved to be a goal up instead of a goal down at half-time in Thurles, and Limerick's backs' heroic stand throughout was a memorable feature of a great game.

Limerick's old weakness in attack was again present, and they swept blindly on the ball frequently. It was their errors here which cost them last year's final, and a re-grouping of their forwards has not quite remedied matters.

Dublin has teams in both the Leinster finals, though neither has impressed in recent outings. The footballers, indeed, were a little lucky at Drogheda last Sunday. The Meath men threw their heart into their work in great style, and their centrefield was excellent. Dublin got the swing of the pendulum at the right time, and their prospects against Louth are not so rosy as we anticipated. Yet it is well to have the two senior teams in the championship at mid-July, and, with a shade of luck and a lot of training, they may go further.

CAVAN'S REAPPEARANCE.

Kerry and Cavan (holders) will be seen out in Senior Championship games to-morrow at Clonmel and Belturbet, where they meet Tipperary and Fermanagh respectively. I think both will win, although Tipperary and Fermanagh have shown considerable improvement.

Tipperary broke Kerry's long sequence of Munster titles in 1928, and their best twenty are at present in training under the charge of the old Aravale Rovers and Rosanna footballer, John Quane, who has long American experience and association with the best home teams. It will be interesting to mark what improvements he can create in this young Tipperary team.

Cavan will be appearing for the first time since the American tour. I hear that all are fit, and they will be expected to win, despite Fermanagh's consistent advance.

There will be a big gathering at Ceannanus Mor (Kells) at the official opening of the new park—one of the best in the country. Louth and Kildare and Meath and Wexford are matched, and there is little between the sides on current form.

THE FIXTURES.

OWNER'S DOUBLE AT HAROLD'S CROSS.

SWIMMING.

THE PEMBROKE CLUB'S GALA.

Two championships—the 220 yards (free style), Irish, and the ladies' squadron of Leinster—are in the programme of the Pembroke Club's gala at Blackrock Baths to-day. Another strong attraction is the polo match, Leinster v. Ulster. The entries for the James Cup (50 metres) number 120, so that from the competitive standpoint the programme is, perhaps, the most attractive of the season, so far. Then there is the diving display by Pete Desjardins, the Olympic and American champion, which of itself should tax the accommodation for spectators to the utmost. The gala will open at 3 o'clock.

Members please note that tickets are still available. Stewards should attend at 2 o'clock.

JAMES'S CUP HEATS.

Last evening at Blackrock Baths the heats of the James's Cup took place. Eighty-three competed, and the winners were:—J. B. White (D.U.) (5), 33 3-5 secs.; J. Lyons (P.S.C.) (5), 32 2-5 secs.; T. LAWN TENNIS.

TITLE FOR MRS. SPERLING

Rogers and Malfroy to Meet in Irish Singles Final.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

NOT for many years has there been a higher standard of tennis seen at Fitzwilliam than yesterday, the second last day of the Irish Championships, and there was a big attendance to watch the matches. Pride of place must be given to the women's singles final, in which Mrs. Sperling gained a complete revenge for her defeat at Wimbledon by Miss Hartigan. The Australian champion could only win four games in two sets on this occasion, and I doubt if any woman in the world would have beaten Mrs. Sperling on yesterday's form.

Although she was so clearly beaten on the score, Miss Hartigan did not play badly. Far from it; her forehand drives were hit just as hard and accurately as at any time during the week; but no matter how she hit the ball, back it came, and to a good length, too. Mrs. Sperling showed the most amazing speed about the court, got back everything possible, and quickly turned defence into attack whenever her opponent failed to keep a good length. She can play every stroke in the game, whereas Miss Hartigan, while possessing greater pace on her forehand drive, is vulnerable on a good length shot to the backhand, and this proved her downfall. Mrs. Sperling nearly always scored a winner with a good-length, well-placed drive to this wing, either outright or by a timely advance to the net. Miss Hartigan only made one stand. She was 1-3 down in the first set and recovered to 3-all. Despite the fact that she never lost either her fighting spirit or her power of attack, and yet could only win one more game out of the next, speaks sufficiently for Mrs. Sperling's play.

MALFROY'S VICTORY.

Both semi-finals in the men's singles went to five sets, and we should see a first-class final to-day. Neither match yesterday produced good tennis, yet both were extremely interesting. First of all, C. E. Malfroy, the New Zealand champion, beat W. L. Breese, the American, in a match which started brilliantly and ended on a disappointing note. Malfroy tried a net attack in the first set and met his master. With supreme ease, Breese brought off the most remarkable angle shots on either wing, and deservedly won the first set, but then Malfroy settled down to stonewall defence, and relied chiefly on his opponent's mistakes. They came in plenty. Tempting mid-court shots found Breese at fault in going out for winners time after time; and Malfroy won the next two sets. Trailing behind in the fourth set, the New Zealander again took up the attack, and again found these tactics unprofitable; for, though he won three games in succession to lead 5-4, he lost the set at 8-6, largely on his own mistakes. When Breese won the first game of the final set, he looked quite likely to win, but, instead, he collapsed in the most extraordinary fashion, and simply presented five games to his opponent, completely mistiming all his ground shots. All Malfroy had to do was to put the ball into court, and this he did, and in the end gained a comfortable victory.

McVEAGH'S GREAT FIGHT.

The other semi-final proved a rare contest between a man who could put the ball into any spot on the court he desired and a man who, by perfection of foot-work, could return everything possible. The better-stroke player should gain the victory in this case, and he did, but T. G. McVeagh gave a superb fighting display against Rogers. He was at a disadvantage on service, but never had the same power and direction from the baseline, but, by trying for everything and by well-judged volleying coups, he took the edge off his opponent's shots, and very nearly caught him on the post. McVeagh did any amount of running to win the first set; he was outplayed in the next two. Splendid courage won him the fourth, but he was 4-love down in the fifth. Here he staged his last rally, and a great rally it was, for he won four games to level the scores, but he simply could not keep it up, and Rogers, keeping his head well, took the next two games for the match.

Mrs. Sperling and Miss McOstrich duly entered the women's doubles final, while Breese and Miss Harman disposed of the mixed doubles holders, R. J. Ritchie and Miss Wallis in surprisingly easy fashion. The last match of the evening produced the most sparkling match of the day, J. Clynton Reed and Breese beating Rogers and Malfroy for a place in the doubles final, in which they will meet McVeagh and E. A. McGuire. All four hit out in splendid style, and the first two sets were touch and go, but afterwards Malfroy simply could not hold his service, and the better-balanced pair won. This event should produce a splendid final to-day. Details:—

DAVIS CUP EUROPEAN ZONE FINAL.

PRAGUE, Friday.

Roderick Menzel beat Vivian McGrath by 10-8, 6-2, 8-6 in the first singles match between Czechoslovakia and Australia in the European zone final of the Davis Cup contest to-day, but Crawford levelled matters by beating Hecht 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

McGrath started off in fine style, and by beautiful ball control went into a 5-2 lead in the first set. A series of long back-hand rallies followed, and McGrath, losing some of his earlier accuracy, fell into numerous errors. He repeatedly sent the ball out of court or netted easy returns. Menzel, with terrific service deliveries and smashes, swept through the second set with ease, and then led 3-1 in the third. McGrath, however, attacked Menzel's back-hand with some beautiful ground shots, and he took the lead at 4-3.

At this point Menzel staged a "come back," and after another series of long rallies he took the set at 6-3. Play was fairly even throughout, but Menzel, making the fullest possible use of his long reach, covered a lot of ground, and was able to return almost everything.

ATHLETICS.

IRISH SUCCESSES AT WHITE CITY.

R. H. WALLACE AND E. BOYCE IN FINE FORM.

R. H. WALLACE (Dublin University) was second to R. K. Brown, of the Achilles Club, in the 440 yards hurdles at the opening of the A.A.A. Championship meeting at the White City, London, yesterday. The final of the hop, step and jump was won very easily by E. Boyce, of the North Belfast Harriers, who cleared 47ft. 8¾ins., but the Royal Ulster tug-o'-war team was beaten in the first round by the odd pull by R.A.S.P. stationed at Feltham, who got through the final from Royal Marines.

Many title-holders were absent, but of those who competed, C. Berger, of Holland, lost his title in the 220 yards in mysterious circumstances. Berger qualified in the first round, but he did not appear on the track when the second round heats were decided. Everyone was saying, "Where is Berger?" Officials searched the dressing-rooms without success. The "flying Dutchman" had flown without making any intimation to the officials of his intention to retire. He reappeared, and was surprised that he had been the object of so much commotion. He explained, through the manager of the Dutch team, that he had decided to save himself for the relay race and the 100 yards championship.

The competitors in the six miles race had to fight their way through a torrential downpour, which in a few moments transformed the arena into a group of small lakes. The rain was so heavy that proceedings were delayed.

The finals decided were:—

HOP, STEP, AND JUMP.

Final—E. Boyce (North Belfast), 47ft. 8¾ins., 1; J. Higginson (Leyland Motors), 43ft. 11¼ins., 2; L. D. Butler (Blackheath), 42ft. 3¼ins., 3.

Final—A. A. Cooper (Woodford Green) (holder), 1; R. Edge (Birmingham), 2; D. E. Brown (Belgrave), 3; L. Dickinson (Lancashire), 4; P. J. E. Piet (Holland), 5. Won by twelve yards.—13 mins. 41 secs.

SIX MILES FLAT.

LABOUR DISPUTES.

The Dublin Trades' Union Council are seeking to secure a settlement in the Somax Shirt Factory dispute, which has now been in progress for some weeks. The strike arose through a dispute over the payment of the Trade Board rate to an employé whom the union state is a warehouseman. A slight disturbance took place outside the factory in South Great George's street yesterday.

Messrs. W. Black, B.L.; Luke J. Duffy and A. A. Odlum have been appointed arbitrators in connection with the application of the Irish National Union of Woodworkers and the Amalgamated Society of Woodworkers for a wage of 1s. 9d. per hour for carpenters employed on the erection of the Thurles beet factory. The date of the hearing of the application has not yet been arranged.

Workers employed by Messrs. Harris Brothers, sand-pit owners, County Dublin, are on strike to enforce a demand for 48s. per week for a 48-hour week

JACOB CUP GOES TO CORK.

MOTOR TRADERS' MEETING AT DELGANY.

THERE were forty-two entries for the Jacob Cup at the Irish Motor, Cycle and Allied Trades' meeting at Delgany yesterday. The trophy went South, W. J. Adair, of the Douglas Club, Cork, in receipt of eight strokes, returning 3 up to beat Clifford McMullan, who played excellent golf from scratch to finish 2 up. Adair, although taking 5 at the 5th, turned 3 up.

J. C. Cooney, senior, winner of the Dunlop Cup on Thursday, was partnered by his son, George, in the fourball, and won with 5 up, but when C. Meldon and F. M. Summerfield drove from the 15th it did not seem as if that score would head the list. They were then 5 up with two strokes to come, but lost these holes, being out of bounds at each, and only tied for third place.

It was an excellently managed meeting, there being no hitch, despite the big "fields" for the four competitions. Each day the competitors and friends were entertained to luncheon and tea by the Dunlop Rubber Co. and Messrs. McMullan Brothers, respectively.

EAST GALWAY HUNT BALL.

Several years ago the East Galway Hunt ball was a venturesome experiment. To-day it is one of the leading social events of Horse Show Week. This year the ball promises to excel in brilliance any of its predecessors. Mr. Enderby, M.F.H., and Mrs. Enderby are bringing from their county a large and distinguished following, and it is expected that members of the leading hunts in Ireland will be present and so add to its success.

Members of the hunt are riding in the inter-hunt competition at the Horse Show during the week.

Those wishing to attend the ball, which is to be held at the Gresham Hotel on Tuesday, 7th August, are advised to book their tables in advance.

FISHING IN CO. KERRY.

BEST IN WORLD, SAYS WITNESS.

RIPARIAN OWNERS' DEMAND.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

KILLARNEY, Friday.

A SITTING of the Inland Fishery Commission was held at Killarney to-day. Mr. F. Gallagher, LL.B., solicitor, Dongeal, presided, and the other members of the Commission present were Messrs. J. P. Digby, Liam Forde and Senator M. Duffy.

Mr. John R. McCarthy, who gave evidence on behalf of the licensed net fishermen of Kenmare, said that poison was used extensively on the River Roughty.

Mr. P. C. O'Mahony, Secretary, Kerry Board of Health, gave evidence on behalf of a number of riparian owners who purchased their holdings under various Land Acts. The fishing rights, he said, were reserved for the use and benefit of the occupant of Muckross House, and the riparian owners made representations and protested against the continuous usurpation of their rights to the River Laune. The Muckross estate was handed over to the nation in 1932, and the fishing rights were also transferred.

RIGHT TO FISH.

As the riparian owners were for the most part successors to the tenant farmers, who put up one of the greatest struggles for their land and their rights in the past, and succeeded in obtaining them, they continue to press for the right to fish the Laune, which flows through the lands for a distance of nearly seven miles.

The riparian owners now submitted that, as they had a native Government, this Government should, as an act of justice, cause these rights to be returned to the tenants along the river.

Mr. John Flynn, T.D., said that as much as one hundred ton of salmon were exported from Killorglin during a year. Messrs. Power and Dodd fished from the river bank and prevented the salmon from going up the Laune and to the Lakes of Killarney. He suggested that nets should be lifted for a month when fish were running.

12,000 FISH A YEAR.

Mr. Alfred Dodd, Clerk to Killorglin Board of Conservators, said that an average of 12,000 fish was killed every year in the estuary and tidal portions of the Laune. He estimated that 4,800 fish go up the river during the weekly close season.

Mr. A. Graham, Killarney, said that fishing in Killarney was very bad for years, and angling visitors would not come to the district. He thought the reason for this was the netting on the Laune.

Captain Pagett, owner of the Owenmore River, said that fishing in Ireland was twice better than in Scotland, and had ten times the potentialities. Ireland, he concluded, was the best fishing country in the world.

RAIN AND FLOODS.

MIXED WEATHER REPORTS.

What is claimed to be the greatest rainfall within living memory, flooding, fire by lightning—and a colliery stopped through drought—were facets of yesterday's weather vagaries reported from different parts of England.

East Denbighshire was yesterday swept by the greatest rainfall in living memory. Roads became impassable and many houses were flooded.

A rain gauge at the offices of the Wrexham and East Denbighshire Water Company recorded a fall of two and three-quarter inches in an hour.

The Hafod Collieries, Ruabon, Denbighshire, employing some hundreds of men, stopped owing to the drought. The owners are endeavouring to pump fresh supplies to begin work next week.

At Folkestone a 'bus from Canterbury skidded during the rainstorm and hit a building. Three persons were slightly injured. Near the Central Station the force of the water in the sewers caused a man-hole cover to be thrown ten feet in the air.

People were marooned in shops and tradesmen had to remove goods from the reach of the water at Coalville, Leicester. Pavements on either side of the main shopping thoroughfare were inches deep in water.

TONE AND COMMENT

DUBLIN FIRM.

COURTAULDS WEAK.

Dublin Stock Market was generally firm yesterday, and business was on an improved scale. The only blot on the day's dealings was the fall in Courtaulds on disappointment at the amount of the interim dividend. A newcomer to the list was the Irish Aluminium Company, the Ord. and Pref. Shares (both 5s. paid) being bid for at a premium of threepence.

Free State Funds were firm, Second Loan rising 10s. to 112½. Land Bonds lost 2s. 6d., and War Loan was 3s. 9d. easier.

Corporation Stock and Banks were unchanged.

Among Rails, Great Southern Guaranteed rose a point to 45.

Dublin Tram Ord. improved a shilling to 124s. 6d., and the Pref. repeated the last price.

Guinness units were actively bid for all day up to 112s., and closed 1½d. better at 111s. 10½d. Dublin Distillers "A" lost threehalfpence, and Cairnes Ord. repeated 7. Power Debs. were offered.

Alliance Gas Debs. improved 10s. to 99, and Bolands Debs. and Burke Debs. were unchanged.

Ranks (Ireland) Ord. was unchanged, and the Pref. put on 4½d. at 22s. 10½d., ex div. Brooks Thomas Pref. were a few half-pence easier, Dublin Granaries shot up no less than 12s. to 35s., and Leathems (Ireland) rose 1s. 3d. to 41s. 3d. Heiton Pref. rose 1s. Millar (A.) Pref. and Irish-American Oil Pref. were unchanged.

Following the London price, Courtaulds were marked 48s. 3d. Elsewhere, the Industrial market was better, Coats and Dunlops being firm spots.

LONDON EASIER.

BRITISH RAILS AGAIN LOWER.

The volume of business passing in the London Stock Markets as a whole yesterday was on rather quiet lines, and in the absence of attention the general trend of values was adverse to holders. There were, however, a number of bright features in evidence, principally among the Industrial descriptions, and in a few instances values closed on a substantially higher plane. Thos. Tillings were an outstanding feature of strength, while British Oxygen came into renewed demand and scored a substantial advance. London Brick and Seager Evans were other firm markets, while Courtaulds, following the sharp recession in the street on Thursday, rallied strongly on bear repurchasing. Elsewhere British Rails remained flat, further profit-taking sales being encountered.

Trading in the gilt-edged department continued on rather modest lines, yet quotations preserved a steady tendency—indeed, the few movements resulting at the close were favourable to holders on balance. There was not a great deal passing among Foreign Government stocks, but here again the tendency kept steady to firm. Chinese and Japanese issues showed fractional improvements, and Austrian Sixes gained the turn. Among Germans, the Potash Sevens finished a point harder at 71, but the 7 p.c. Loan was ½ lower to 60.

There was a continuance of the profit-taking noticeable recently in British Rails, and values were lowered practically throughout the list. The Prefs. weakened under the lead of Midland 4 p.c., which lost 1½ points at 80½. Colonial and Foreign Rails attracted only a moderate business, but preserved a steady appearance, Argentines easily holding the previous day's advances.

Among Mines, Kaffirs were dullish on Cape selling, while Oils remained quiet. Rubber shares lost ground in sympathy with the lower level ruling for the commodity.

IRISH BANK REPORT.

MUNSTER AND LEINSTER.

The report and balance sheet of the Munster and Leinster Bank for the half-year ended 30th June last appear in our columns to-day. The net profits for the past six months amount to £68,892, as compared with £72,223 for the corresponding period of 1933. With the balance carried forward from the last account the amount available for distribution is £110,203, and the directors recommend the dividend for the half-year at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, free of income tax, the transfer of £12,500 to contingencies account, the reduction of Bank premises by £5,000, and the placing of £5,000 to the Staff Pensions Fund, leaving £42,703 to be carried forward to the next account. The deposits and credit balances at the end of June stand at the substantial figure of £24,543,010. The notes in circulation at £824,064 vary little with the figures of June, 1933. Advances to customers at £11,995,232 show a slight increase compared with the figures of twelve months ago. Cash, money at call, and Treasury bills stand at £2,437,117, as compared with £3,110,595 a year ago, while investments in Irish and British Government Stocks and other gilt-edged securities stand at £12,387,817. The total of the Bank's liquid assets is, therefore, £14,824,935, a figure which represents over 58 per cent. of the institution's entire liability to the public.

The meeting of the shareholders will be held in Cork on Wednesday, 25th July, at 1 o'clock p.m.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

BRITISH OXYGEN REVIVE.

Dealers in the Industrial market yesterday showed a disposition to even up commitments in most sections. This was attributed to the disappointing interim dividend declaration by Courtaulds, and values generally moved in irregular fashion. The fall which occurred in these shares was followed by a certain amount of bear covering, and this caused a sharp rally in the price. Dealings started in Griffiths Hughes Proprietaries Preference, and a good premium was established over the issue price.

Trading on this side among the trans-Atlantic counters remained of small dimensions, and prices moved in uncertain fashion.

Cables and Wireless stocks were fairly well maintained, despite a little week-end selling.

Aviation and kindred descriptions were subjected to moderate week-end realisations, as a result of which prices closed easier.

In the Motor group, Thomas Tilling continued prominent, further buying taking the price at one time to 4 19/32, while the shares finished with an improvement of 1/16 at 4 9/16. Moderate profit-taking sales resulted in a fall of 6d. in Leylands to 35s., and shrinkages also occurred in Fords and Morris 7½ per cent. Pref.

A fair business was reported in Iron, Coal and Steel descriptions. Babcock and Wilcox were a good market, advancing 7½d. to 40s. 3d., and Lambert Bros. came into request and recovered 6d. to 19s.

Electrical Equipments commanded a moderate amount of attention, but the business transacted had little influence on prices.

Among Breweries, Ind. Coope were favoured, rising to 81s. 6d. A fair demand was again evident for Allsopps and Watney Defd., which hardened further, while Mitchells and Butlers and Courage Ord. showed to advantage.

In the Tobacco group Gallahers responded to further provincial inquiries, and rose another 9d. Godfrey Phillips and British-American Tobacco 5 per cent. Pref. both improved further, but "Imps" were a shade easier, finishing at 125s. 9d.

Textile issues wore a somewhat ragged appearance, though business was small.

Among Rayon issues, Courtaulds made some recovery from their set-back following the interim dividend announcement. After opening at 47s. 6d., the price went ahead to 48s. 6d., but gave way to 47s. 9d. during the afternoon, to recover and close 1s. 9d. better on balance at 48s.

In the Miscellaneous group, British Oxygen came in for renewed support in anticipation of fresh developments, their price rallying to 72s., making them 1s. 6d. better on the day. A little profit-taking lowered Dunlops to 46s. 4½d., and United Molasses to 19s., while the Chemical issues were also a shade easier.

OIL SHARES NEGLECTED.

The firmness which had characterised leading Oil shares during the earlier days of the week was absent yesterday, and in its place the tendency of the market as a whole became dull.

Owing to the almost entire absence of interest, either public or professional, there was a modest scaling down of prices. In no case, however, was there any pronounced selling pressure, sentiment rather than actual business governing the course of prices.

RUBBER SHARES IDLE.

Extremely quiet conditions prevailed in the Rubber Share market yesterday, and the lack of interest, coupled with the rather easier tendency apparent in the raw material department, was responsible for the easier conditions which developed. Actual share price movements, however, were few, whilst where change occurred the movement was of modest proportions. United Sua Betong went off to 61s. 3d., a loss of 9d., and Kuala Lumpur at 34s. 4½d. and F.M.S. Plants at 37s. 6d. were 7½d. and 6d. lower respectively. Tandjong shed 4½d. to 26s. 6d., while Rubber Trust, Malayalam and Anglo-Dutch all closed fractionally easier. In the raw material department spot and July sold from 7¼d. to 7 3/16d. per pound, with August easing from 7 5/16d. to 7¼d. per pound. October to December sold 7 7/16d. to 7⅜d. per pound, and January to March 7 9/16d. to 7 7/16d. per pound. It is expected that London stocks of rubber on Monday next will show an expansion of something like 1,300 tons, whilst Liverpool's holding may be 200 tons higher.

PROVINCIAL MARKETS.

DROGHEDA.—Store cattle, 15 months to 2 years £5 5/- to £7 10/-, 2 to 3 years £7 15/- to £9 10/-; fat cattle, 2 to 3 years £10 to £12 10/-; springers (2nd class) £9 to £12. Store lambs (mountain) 11/- to 15/-, fat lambs 17/6 to 23/, store sheep (mountain) 14/- to 18/-, fat sheep 30/- to 42/-.

KILKENNY.—Store cattle: 15 months to 2 years £5 to £7 10/-, 2 to 3 years £7 10/- to £9; fat cattle, 3 years and over £9 to £12 10/-; springers £11 10/- to £15. Store lambs, 16/- to 20/-; fat lambs, 19/- to 25/-; fat sheep, 27/- to 38/-.

Moy.—The monthly fair was held yesterday, and was well attended by buyers and dealers. The turnout of animals was large. Trade in all classes was very flat, and those who disposed of their cattle did so at a very low price. There was a good demand for lambs, and prices ranged from 35/- to £2 each. In the horse fair, while animals of superior class were maintaining the advanced prices, business was duller than usual. Five-year-old suited for city work sold from £30 to £40 each, useful horses £20 to £30 each, colts, fillies and ponies £15 to £25 each, cobs £22 to £28 10/- each.

Kells.—The July fair, held yesterday, was most disappointing. The cattle supply was small, and only a couple of buyers attended. Except for a few beef cattle sold at about 20/- per cwt., liveweight, practically no business was transacted in cattle. The sheep and lamb trade was also much below expectations. A small supply of lambs cashed at prices ranging from 15/- to 27/6 each. The horse fair, on the other hand, was in marked contrast to the cattle and sheep departments. There was a fair supply of horses on offer, mostly of the rough farming type. There was a good demand for all sorts of animals, and the prices ranged from £30 each downwards. Good class horses were quickly bought up, and in the end a good clearance was effected.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET.

Business was on a very small scale in the American market last evening, and prices closed with an irregular appearance. Nickels finished around 25 11/16; Radios gained 1/16 to 6⅞; Steels receded to 38⅞; "Canadas" were a shade off at 13⅞, while Hydros were fractionally higher at 5 5/16. American Celanese Holdings and Tractions remained around the "House" closing levels.

THE MONEY MARKET

TREASURY BILL RATE LOWER.

The price of gold was yesterday fixed 1d. higher at 138s. 0½d. per oz. fine. Only £19,000 was available in the market.

There was a fair demand for short loans at ¾ per cent., borrowers occasionally paying ⅞ per cent. In the discount market rates were not very firm on the Treasury bill results. Fine three months' bills were quoted at ⅞ per cent., and the "hot" Treasuries at 13/16 to under. Applications were received at the Bank of England yesterday for £35,000,000 Treasury bills. Tenders dated Monday to Friday of next week at £99 16s. get about 27 per cent., above in full. Tenders dated Saturday at £99 16s. 1d. and above receive in full. These figures indicate an average rate of just under 16s. per cent., as compared with 16s. 4d. per cent. for last week's bills.

The Bank of England announced the purchase of £53,400 in bar gold.

Silver fell 1/16d. on China selling to 20 7/16d. per oz. for spot and 20 11/16d. for forward delivery.

Comparatively quiet conditions again prevailed in the Foreign Exchange market yesterday and movements of the principal rates were within narrow limits. The trend of the market was less favourable to London in the morning and sterling declined on all the principal centres. This was due to steady buying of the dollar and the franc for ordinary commercial purposes. Later in the day the trend was reversed, partly, it is believed, as the result of intervention by the London control with small sales of francs. In consequence final rates were hardly changed from Thursday. The Argentine peso suffered a slight set-back following Thursday's advance, the final quotation being 26⅝d., against 26⅜d. on Thursday. Far Eastern currencies were slightly cheaper in response to the fall in the price of bar silver.

LONDON MINING MARKET DULL.

SHRINKAGES IN ALL DEPARTMENTS.

After a week of general dulness it was hardly to be expected that the Mining Market would show any great improvement on the last dealing day. In the Kaffir market, while the general run of shares remained more or less dull and inclined to droop, some of the specialities were particularly active. East Rand Consols fluctuated widely and left off appreciably lower, and Lace Props. were also a weak spot.

As will be seen from a glance at the list of quotations, the market as a whole made a rather poor showing, but it is fairly safe to say that the shrinkages were mostly the result of precautionary measures adopted by dealers rather than of actual trading.

There was very little life in the Rhodesian department, and prices mostly fell away from sheer inanition.

The improvement noticeable in the West African department on the preceding day was not held and values went off.

With the price of the metal little altered, Tin descriptions attracted but little attention, and the few movements recorded were irregular in character and insignificant in extent. Closing prices:—

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

BANK OF IRELAND.

The Governors of the Bank of Ireland have declared a dividend of 6½ per cent. for half-year ended June 30, 1934, Interim. (Same.)

QUEENSLAND NATIONAL BANK.

Net profit for the year, £67,411, against £73,039 in 1932-1933. Final dividend of 2 per cent., making 4 per cent. (same), a balance of £19,095 going forward.

Costa Rica Railway.—Dividend of 2 per cent. (same) on capital stock.

Dundee, Perth, and London Shipping.—The report of the Dundee, Perth and London Shipping Company for the year ended May 31, 1934, states that balance at credit of profit and loss account, after providing for depreciation, taxation, and paying interim dividend of 4 per cent., less tax, amounted to £21,718. As already announced, it is proposed to pay a further dividend of 6 per cent., less tax, maintaining the dividend at 10 per cent. for the year, which will require £13,020, and to carry forward £8,698. It is stated that the volume of traffic carried by the company's steamers has been satisfactory.

Foreign and Colonial Investment Trust.—Interim dividends on account of the year ending 10th January next of 2½ per cent. actual on Preference and 2 per cent. actual on Ordinary.

E. Randall.—Ordinary interim of 2½ per cent. (same).

F. Stoddard and Co.—Dividend on Ordinary at rate of 5 per cent. per annum for year (2½ per cent.).

Grout and Co.—After deducting all expenses and adding income from investments, profits of Grout and Co. (manufacturers of silk crepe and other fabrics) in the year to April 30 last were £1,741 smaller at £9,171, to which was added transfer fees of £59 and £1,847 a surplus from income-tax relief, making total income £11,077. The corresponding figure last year was £10,940, but £10,000 was also appropriated from taxation reserve. A sum of £7,370, as against £7,660, has been reserved for depreciation, and, after allowing for Debenture charges and directors' fees, profits were £9,490 lower at £857. To this was added £12,035 brought in, making £12,892, from which the Preference dividend absorbed £971, and the remaining £11,921 is to be carried forward. Owing to the recent changes in the duties payable on silk, stocks have been written down by £10,000 taken from reserve, but as there appears to be every reason for anticipating more stable markets, the current year should be more satisfactory. If this should be realised, interim dividends may be initiated. For the preceding year a distribution of 4 per cent. was made on the Ordinary shares.

Geo. Adlam and Sons.—Debit brought in was £10,851, to which must be added loss for year £4,312, making debit to be carried forward £15,163.

Heywood Carriage Co.—Dividend 6d. per share, tax free, on Ordinary, equal to 5 per cent. actual, for past six months. (Same.)

Hyde Park Hotel.—Profit on trading for year, after providing for tax, amounted to £5,264, against loss £4,133. After interest on Debentures, directors' and trustees' fees, amounting to £15,712, and premium on sinking fund policy (due June 1, 1933) and interest thereon, £3,401, loss was £13,849. Moratorium has been continued for further period of one year.

J. W. Benson.—Final dividend of 5 per cent. on Ordinary, making 7½ per cent. (same).

Metropolitan Trust.—The interim dividend on the Ordinary stock is to be maintained at 5 per cent.

McDougall's Trust.—A maiden dividend on the 1,498,674 £1 Ordinary shares of 2 per cent. for the period ended June 30 last.

Telephone and General Trust.—Dividend of 3½ per cent., less tax, on Preference in respect of the six months ended 30th June, 1934.

Tin Fields of Nigeria.—Initial dividend of 2 per cent. Directors also propose interim in respect of the current year of 1 1-5 per cent.

Victory Insurance.—In 1933, revenue, less reinsurances, amounted to £758,709, which compared with £723,300 in 1932. Losses absorbed £484,116 net, against £564,712, while commission, taxation, and management expenses totalled £257,372, as against £257,438. The fire and general fund carried forward is £14,163 higher at £303,483, and £3,057, against £26,431, was transferred to profit and loss. After providing for administration fees, this account shows a surplus of £48,976, which compares with £10,596 a year ago. The market value of the investments as at December 31 was £348,514 as against £349,855 a year previously. The last dividend was 5 per cent for 1929.

W. Barratt and Co.—Final Ordinary dividend of 5½ per cent., making 9 per cent. for the year. This compares with a final of 4½ per cent., making 7 per cent. in the previous year.

THE AMERICAN MARKETS.

LIST RECOVERS EARLY LOSSES: FIRM CLOSE.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

NEW YORK, Friday.

One of the redeeming features of an otherwise disappointing market to-day was the fact that a decline which extended over the major part of the session was accompanied by extreme dullness. Prices made a late recovery, and the list at the close was slightly on the higher side. Sales totalled 530,000 shares.

After a steady opening the market turned quiet and easy. Railroad shares continued to be depressed, several issues dropping a point, but the declines in the other sections were limited generally to minor fractions. "Wet" stocks were inclined to sag. Tobacco shares kept steady on the National Recovery Administration's order fixing the sale prices for cigarettes.

The market was narrow and indecisive in the afternoon. Further heaviness was shown by the Railroad group, the reason being due partly to the decline in freight-car loadings, as well as the controversy regarding the Pension Bill and the prospects of a campaign for higher freight rates. This weakness in Rails tended to hold down the other sections of the market, with the exception of Minings, which were steady to firm.

In the late dealings prices rallied under the leadership of Rails, which largely recovered their previous losses, while the list generally showed net gains. The volume of business expanded to a moderate extent on the advance, and the market closed firm.

WHEAT opened steady, with prices ⅜c. to ¼c. The market then advanced on the strength of cables, combined with reports of a bullish estimate of the Australian crop and a fair export interest. Prices subsequently reacted, however, on a forecast of showers and on private reports of improvement in the crop, which, together, induced an influx of selling orders. Later the market again rallied on bullish private advices of crop damage, buying by seaboard houses, and on covering. The close was steady, with values 1⅛c. to 1½c higher. CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Friday.

The Grain market backed and filled nervously at the opening to-day, a smaller buying power and scattered "hedge" pressure offsetting bullish foreign advices. A renewal of outside buying interest and a lightening of offerings, however, were sufficient to advance the prices of all grains in the afternoon session. The cash markets were firm. On the wheat market selling by commission houses and by the Farmers' National Association, together with the easiness of Winnipeg, were depressing factors, but prices later rallied on buying by Eastern houses and covering, while the subsequent rally in Winnipeg assisted the advance. Reports that rains are needed in Nebraska and Kansas encouraged buying by commission houses on the maize market, but prices reacted on liberal offerings from the country and pressure by local operators, while the influence of wheat was an unfavourable factor. The market later rallied on bullish South-Western crop news and an increased outside interest, while the advance in wheat was also a stimulating factor. Rye experienced some liquidation, and prices moved in unison with wheat. Oats fluctuated in sympathy with maize.

WHEAT opened steady, with prices ¼c. down to ⅛c. up, and closed firm, 2⅞c. to 3¼c. higher.

New Northern Railway Director.

Mr. F. E. Rebbick, Chairman of Messrs. Harland and Wolff, Ltd., has been appointed a director of the Northern Counties Railway system of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, which operates the railway from Belfast to Londonderry and Portrush. Mr. Rebbick will fill the vacancy created by the death of Mr. Frank Tatlow. In addition to being Chairman of Messrs. Harland and Wolffs, Ltd., Mr. Rebbick is a Vice-President of the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation, a director of National Shipbuilders' Security, Ltd., and of Burmeister and Wain (Diesel System) Oil Engine Co., Ltd. He is also a member of the Belfast Harbour Board, a member of the Worshipful Company of Shipwrights, a member of the Council of the Institution of Naval Architects, and a member of various other professional organisations. Since 1919 he has been a managing director of Messrs. Harland and Wolff, and in August, 1930, he was appointed Chairman of that concern.

BANK OF ENGLAND RETURN.

Changes in the current Bank of England return are largely the result of the return to "normal" after the heavy money turnover over the turn of the half-year. The repayments of the loans borrowed at the Bank to help the market over the difficult end-June conditions is reflected in the discount and advances item, which has declined by £9,230,008 to £7,832,157.

The big excess of Treasury bill maturities over payments during the week has resulted in a decline of £9,217,010 in public deposits, which are now at £17,433,369. Bankers' deposits, on the other hand, have increased by £2,405,687 to £97,285,294. Private accounts are down by £1,318,599 at £36,178,433, while over the year the fall in this item is no less than £20,155,860. The figure was swollen at this time last year as a result of the repayment of a large part of the French credit.

There has been a reflux of currency of £1,167,400, which brings the total active note circulation down to £384,625,984 as compared with £378,471,340 at this time in 1933, and as the Bank's total holding of coin and bullion is almost unchanged the reserve shows an increase of £1,171,918 at £67,528,918.

Consequent upon the increase in the Bank's reserve and the decline in the deposits' item, the proportion of reserve to liabilities has risen to 44.7 p.c., compared with 41.7 p.c. a week ago and 42.8 p.c. at this time last year.

Week ending Wednesday, 11th July, 1934.

KAYE DON'S STORY OF ACCIDENT.

MANX MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE.

Kaye Don, the racing motorist, at the Manx Assizes, Douglas, Isle of Man, yesterday, gave evidence on his own behalf in connection with the manslaughter charge brought against him.

During a practice run in the Isle of Man on May 28th last Don's mechanic, Francis Tayler (27), Oxford, was fatally injured in a collision with another car.

Kaye Don said: "I drove the car in the morning, and complained about the steering. I took it to Tayler and told him the car had a tendency to wander."

Don said that he also drove the car again in the afternoon for a brake test, and he again said that the steering would have to be attended to. Later he was told that the king pin bushes were loose, and he left the mechanic to adjust them. In the evening he went to play bridge, but was told that Tayler wanted him to take out the car for another test.

"I told him that I could not possibly do so," said Mr. Don, "as I was just going to play bridge. One or two people said I should go out in fairness to Tayler, who had worked so hard at the car, and I agreed to do so.

"I want everyone to understand that I am not suggesting that Tayler insisted on the car going out. It was my car. I felt that he had worked hard and wanted it tested."

Describing the accident Kaye Don said: "I went to negotiate this corner, and I saw the lights of another car approximately fifty yards before the bend. I went to take the corner in the ordinary way. The car did not respond to the steering, and my hub cap caught the hub cap of the other car."

Mr. E. C. Kneen (for the defence)—Would there be any difficulty in taking this bend at fifty miles an hour?—It is quite a fast bend, and I think it is one that could have been taken at eighty miles per hour.

Did Tayler complain about your speed or the way in which you were driving?—No.

This ended Kaye Don's evidence in chief, and the proceedings were adjourned until to-day. Don is on continuous bail during the trial.

"TAKE PART IN PUBLIC LIFE."

BISHOP OF OSSORY'S ADVICE.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

KILKENNY, Friday.

Addressing the Ossory Diocesan Synod in the Chapter Room, St. Canice's Cathedral, to-day, the Bishop said that there never was a time when it was more necessary that they should be true to the principles of their faith and should show them forth in their daily lives.

"In these days many of our people are inclined to hold aloof from the life of the country and say, 'there is nothing that we can do; we are too small a body to have any real influence.' But there never is a time, there never can be a time when it can be right for a Christian man to take up that attitude. The ancient Church to which we belong is rooted deep in the life of this country and we have a contribution to make to the national life. the contribution which every man can make who is honest, upright and just in public and private life; the contribution which every man will make who is kindly tolerant, charitable and ready to work with those who differ from him; the contribution which every man will make who is ready to give his time and his talents to the service of others working with love and energy, and without self-seeking, for the common good. May we all strive to give this contribution to the life of our country in these anxious and difficult days. May we keep up our courage and our hope; so shall we be true to the teaching of our Church, so shall we bear witness to the Master whom we serve."

The Bishop made a strong appeal on behalf of St. Patrick's Memorial Missionary Fund, a lay man's movement that aimed at collecting £100,000 for the missionary work of their Church.

DRASTIC "CUT" OF CAPITAL.

INVESTMENT TRUST AGREEMENT.

By agreeing to proposals to reorganise the capital stockholders in the Clyde and Mersey Investment Trust, Limited, a £1,250,000 Glasgow concern have cut their holdings by £837,500. The reorganisation embodies a cancellation of ten shillings in respect of each pound of Five per Cent. Cumulative Preference Stock held, and eighteen shillings and sixpence in respect of each pound in Ordinary Stock. This decision, reached at a meeting of stockholders yesterday, ends a controversy which had occupied many meetings for a period of more than a year. Various proposals for reorganisation were submitted, but yesterday's plan, submitted by a new Board of directors, was the only one to secure unanimity.
